PREFACE

FOLLOWING on my decipherment and publication of the Mercara plates in 1872, I discovered the Ganga inscriptions Nos. 4 and 5, and some copies, mostly imperfect, of various inscriptions in Coorg were furnished to me by Government in the time of Colonel Hill with a view to their being translated. But owing to all my spare time being taken up with numerous other important engagements and absence on duty in Calcutta, it was not till 1886 that the first edition of this work was issued. Though the light thus thrown upon the early history of the country was valuable as far as it went, I could not but regret, when recently called upon to compile the Gazetteer of Coorg for the new Imperial Gazetteer of India, the absence of fuller and more satisfactory information on the subject. Under the conviction that something additional might probably be found in the way of epigraphic records, I deputed two of my Archæological Assistants, with the approval of the Commissioner (Mr. Lionel Davidson), to make inquiries. The result fully justified my expectation. For copies of a number of inscriptions previously unknown were obtained, which enabled the filling up of the blanks hitherto existing in the past history. These were published as supplements to the Tumkūr and Bangalore volumes (xii and ix) of my Epigraphia Carnatica. Four more have now been added of which notice was received from Mr. L. T. Harris.

But the Government of India having been pleased, on the application of the Chief Commissioner, the Hon'ble Mr. S M. Fraser, to sanction the issue of a revised edition of the work, brought up to date, the opportunity has been taken of collecting all belonging to Coorg, now more than trebled in number, into one volume in this edition, and publishing them on the same plan as in the remaining volumes of the series, of which this forms the first. For the present edition I have received much assistance from the impressions procured for me by Rao Sāhib Krishna Śāstri, Assistant Superintendent for Epigraphy, Southern Circle.

COORG INSCRIPTIONS

INTRODUCTION

THE inscriptions of Coorg, though few in number, are of importance, especially the earlier ones. It is true they tell us little about the Koḍagas, or Coorgs, themselves. Nor was this to be expected, for the Coorgs are naturally an unlettered race, their very language having no written characters[1]; and although the predominant class, they form no more than one-fifth of the population. The earliest express mention of the Koḍagas that has been met with in inscriptions is in 1174, in the time of the Hoysaḷa king Vīra-Ballāḷa (Hs 20). They are also mentioned in 1722, in the time of Chikka Dēva-Rāja of Mysore (Sr 64). But the name Kuḍakam (Coorg) apparently occurs in Tamil literature so far back as the 2nd century[2]; and the Seven Kombu of Sk 136 may have reference to Coorg in 1068.

Nevertheless, some idea may be formed of ancient divisions of the country. Thus, in 887, under the Gangas, we have mention (Cg 2) of the Male Thousand (the hill country to the west). This was apparently ruled in 977 by four Malepas or hill chiefs (Cg 4). In 1013, Kuḍa-malaināḍ in Tamil (TN 35), Koḍaga-malenāḍ in Kannaḍa (TN 122), is included in the conquests of the Chōḷa king Rājarāja. In 1095 the Kadamba Duddharasa is described (Cg 57) as 'a pleasure-garden of the Malepas,' meaning perhaps that they found with him a safe retreat. In 1124 we find (Bl 178) the Changāḷvas coming to the aid of the Malepas against the Hoysaḷas. And in 1174 two Coorg chiefs (? Malepas) and the Koḍagas of all the nāḍs assisted the Changāḷva king in his final struggle against the Hoysaḷas (Hs 20). From the mention here of Kuruche, this may have been a chief place of the Malepas. In 1275 and 1281 the Hoysaḷa king Nārasimha III signs himself (Md 79, TN 100) Malaparoḷ-gaṇḍa, 'champion among the Malapas or Malepas,' but this may have been a Hoysaḷa title from the beginning.

In the south-east, also under the Gangas, in 888 and 978 (Cg 2, 4) there was a district called the Peddoṛegare or Beddoṛegare Seventy (the banks, gare, of the Ped-doṛe or big river, the existing Doḍḍa-hoḷe or Lakshmaṇtīrtha). At the latter date the king's younger brother was its governor. North from the above were the Changāḷvas, who filled a large space in the history of the country. Their later capital was at Nañjarājapaṭṭaṇa, which still gives its name to the northern tāluq of Coorg. North from them, again, were the Kongāḷvas, who were established in the Yēḷusāvira or Seven Thousand country by the Chōḷas in 1004 (Cg 46), and who disappeared soon after the expulsion of the Chōḷas from Mysore by the Hoysaḷas in 1116. Muḷḷūr seems to have been an important place in their territory. In 1390 Muḷḷūr-nāḍ was given as a grant by the Vijayanagar king Harihara II to an officer named Gonka-Ṛaḍḍi-nāyaka, serving under his general Guṇḍappa-daṇḍanāyaka (Cg 39).

Firishta says that at the end of the 16th century Coorg proper was governed by its own chiefs, called Nāyaks, who admitted the supremacy of Vijayanagar. According to tradition the country was divided into twelve Kombus and thirty-five Nāḍs. The Changāḷvas fell before the Mysoreans in 1644, and the Coorg Rājas next established themselves as masters of the whole country, until it was annexed to British India in 1834. The close connection of the province with Mysore throughout the greater part of its history is made clear by these records, a connection which has been perpetuated to the present day in the arrangements for its administration by the British Government.

The earlier inscriptions show that the Jain faith was exclusively the State or court religion at first. Then followed the Śaiva and Vaishṇava creeds; and lastly the Vīra-Śaiva or Lingāyit form of Śaivism. All this while the Coorgs no doubt, as now, kept to their own Ancestor and Demon worship. The former is one of the most widely extended in the world[1]. No. 5, dated in 1000, possibly furnishes evidence of the antiquity of the Coorg houses. A Coorg kaḍaṅga is named in No. 2, even in 888.

Kadambas

The inscriptions which have now been discovered enable us to trace the history of Coorg as far back as early in the Christian era. But the puranic account of the foundation of the State and monarchy, given in the Kāvērī-Māhātmya, connects it with a prince named Chandravarmmā, the son of a king of the Matsya country, who was succeeded by his son Dēvakānta. Now Matsya (Virāṭa's capital) has been identified with Hāṅgal in Dharwar (called Virāṭan-kōṭe), and there is ground for the conclusion that Chandravarmmā was a Kadamba prince. The Kadambas were a line of independent kings ruling in the west of Mysore, in North and South Kanara, and other parts, between the 3rd and 6th centuries. They were Mysorean in origin, and are identified with Banavāsi as their capital. This is situated on the river Varadā, on the north-west frontier of Mysore, in North Kanara. It had the Brāhman name Jayanti or Vaijayanti. Banavāsi was a very ancient city, being one of the places to which Buddhist missionaries are said to have been sent in the time of the Maurya emperor Aśōka, the 3rd century B.C.; and it is also mentioned by Ptolemy in the 2nd century A.D.

The origin and rise of the Kadambas is described in the fine old inscription on a pillar at Tālagunda in the Shikārpur tāluq of Mysore (Sk 176). According to this, a Brāhman student in the agrahāra of Sthānakundūr (Tālagunda) was the progenitor of the royal line. He went to the Pallava capital (Kānchī, or Conjeeveram, near Madras) in order to complete his studies, but owing to a violent quarrel there with Pallava horsemen, he resolved, for the purpose of revenging the insults he had received as a Brāhman, to become a Kshattriya. Training himself in the use of arms, he escaped to the forests leading to Śrīparvata (Karnūl District), where he became so powerful, levying tribute from the great Bāṇa (or Bṛihad-Bāṇa) and other kings, that the Pallavas found it impossible to put him down. They therefore resolved to recognize him as a king, and installed him in a territory extending to the Western Ocean. He is known as Mayūravarmmā. Of his successors, one of the most distinguished was Kākustha, whose daughters were given in marriage to the Gupta and other kings. The reference is probably to Samudra-Gupta, who made an expedition throughout the South, as recorded on the pillar at Allahabad. Another daughter was apparently given to the Ganga king of Mysore. The Kadambas were subdued by the Chālukyas from the North in the 6th century, but held subordinate positions for several centuries later. We know from inscriptions that Kadamba states existed in the 11th century in the country now called Manjarābād, in the north of Coorg; and in the 10th to the 12th century in Bayalnād, now called Wainād, to the south of Coorg; as well as in Hāngal and Goa.

Of the Kadambas of Manjarābād we have an inscription in Coorg itself (No. 57), dated in 1095. It relates to a king named Duddharasa, and is a vīra-śāsana erected to his memory by his brother Jūjarasa. Duddha is described as a mahā-maṇḍalēśvara, lord of Tripura, sun to the Balīndra-kula,[1] a pleasure-garden of the Malepas (or hill chiefs), his father's warrior (ayyan-aṅkakāra), and has other titles. He protected Maleya (Malabar), and was governing Samhatha-nāḍ, Pākuvāḍi and other places; having 15 horses, 50 male servants, 250 strong men (ekkaṭigaru), 45 retainers of good family, and a retinue of many subjects, guards, relatives, and landholders. He was the son of Hiṭṭeyarasa and Junjala-Dēvi. At the request of his wife Chikkala-Dēvi, he had a tank made. He also endowed Brāhmans, and formed rice-fields at the river. The inscription was apparently composed by Moḷate-Duddhamalla, his minister for peace and war, and written by the sēnabōva's son Bamma-dēva.

Of this Duddharasa we have a record in Mj 18, of the same year, when his son Dayasimha was on the throne. Here Duddha is styled a mahārāja, and is said to be the son of Chāgi-mahārāja, which must have been the titular name of his father. By his wife Mēchalarasi he had three sons—Sārtthiga-nṛipa, Chāgi-mahārāja, and Dayasimha-nṛipa. The last is described as a crest-jewel of the Kadamba-vaṁśa, and lord of Banavāsi-pura. He slew an enemy named Śrīpāla, who had an immense army. His court resounded with the mingled notes of songs, drums, dances, flutes and guitars; he was a critical examiner of poems and dramas; and proficient in logic, grammar, painting, music and many others of the sixty-four branches of learning. Why have another Bhārata story (says the inscription); is not Dayasimha's history enough?[2] We also have a notice of Duddha in Sk 151, where Chāmuṇḍa-Rāyarasa, the governor of the Banavase Twelve Thousand under the Chālukyas in 1047, has, among other epithets, that of 'a grindstone to Duddha.'

If Duddha-mahārāja was preceded on the throne by his father Chāgi-mahārāja, as we must suppose was the case, they connect with the Kadamba king Nīti-mahārāja, of whom there is a series of seven inscriptions in Manjarābād. The dates range from 1026 (Mj 53) to about 1035 (Mj 55), the latter recording his death with the performance of the Jaina rite of sannyasanam. The inscriptions are very short and much effaced. In Mj 51 only . . . loḷe remains of the name of his residence, and Mj 55 contained the name of his father, which is gone.

Gangas

But the earliest of the inscriptions in Coorg show that this country formed part of the territory of the Gangas, a line of kings who ruled over Mysore from about the 2nd to the 11th century. Their kingdom was called Gangavāḍi, described as a Ninety-six Thousand country, and their capital, at first Kuvalāla or Kovalāla (Kolār), was removed in the 3rd century to Talakāḍ on the Kāvērī, in the south-east of the Mysore District. The dynasty was founded by two Jain princes of the Ikshvāku (Solar) race, who came from the North, and were aided

[1] While he is here said to be of the Balīndra-kula, his son, in the Manjarābād record of the same date, is said to be of the Kadamba-vaṁśa. But the Duddha in both must be the same person, as Coorg in this part and Manjarābād adjoin one another and are really one territory.

[2] The same question is asked (Hn 53) with reference to the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇuvarddhana—A Duddarasa is mentioned as associated with the Hoysaḷa royal family in 1176 (Cg 33).

by the Jain āchārya Simhanandi,[1] whom they met at Pērūr, still distinguished as Ganga-Pērūr (in the Kaḍapa District). By name, the Gangas seem to be connected with the Gangaridæ or tribes of the Ganges valley who, according to Greek and Roman accounts of the times of Alexander the Great and Seleucus Nicator, were subjects of Chandra-Gupta, the founder of the Maurya dynasty of Pāṭalīputra (now Patna on the Ganges). Jain traditions represent him as ending his life at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa in Mysore. The Gangaridæ are mentioned by Ptolemy, and the Latin authors Virgil, Valerius Flaccus, and Curtius also make reference to them. Pliny writes of the Gangaridæ Calingæ or Gangas of Kalinga (Orissa and neighbouring parts), where there was an important line of Ganga kings in the 7th and 8th centuries, and where Ganga kings ruled down to as late as the 16th century. But the Gangas of Mysore were the original line, and the Gangaḍikāras, who still form the largest section of the agricultural population of Mysore, represent their former subjects, this name being a contraction from Gangavāḍikāra.

Curiously enough, the first discovery of this important line of kings, who were the rulers of Mysore for nearly the whole of the first millennium of the Christian era, but whose very name had dropped into oblivion, was due to the copper plates (Cg 1) found in the treasury at Mercara[2]. As to when or by whom they were placed there no trace has been found, and they relate, not to any place in Coorg, but to one in Mysore. They were brought to the notice of Dr. Burgess by Mr. Graeter, and are now deposited in the Lutheran Mission Museum at Basle in Switzerland. Much controversy arose as to their date, the year 388 being given in the plates without mention of any era. By some they were accepted as one of the earliest unquestionable inscriptions discovered in India, whilst others imagined they might be forgeries. The full and abundant information that has since come to light in the inscriptions obtained by me from all parts of Mysore, some of which were published at the time in the Indian Antiquary or other works, and all of which appear in full in the volumes of my Epigraphia Carnatica, enables us to maintain the credibility of the Mercara plates. The date contained in them, as regards the year, is correct according to the Śaka era, nor is this belied by the palæography[3]. The language of the main portion is Sanskrit, but the details of the grant are in Haḷa Kannaḍa.

What the plates tell us is, that of a gift made by the Ganga king Koṅgaṇi-mahādhirāja, named Avinīta, whose pedigree is given, to a Jain priest, whose spiritual descent is also given, in the year three hundred and eighty-eight (in words), with other details of the month, day, etc.,[4] (but as usual at that early period with no name of the cyclic year), the minister

[1] He is named as a great poet by Indrabhūti in his Samayabhāshaṇa, along with Ēlāchārya (Padmanandi, the guru of Śākaṭāyana) and Pūjyapāda (I.A., xii, 20); and in SB 54 is mentioned next to Samantabhadra, who belongs to the 2nd century.

[2] First deciphered by me and published in 1872 (Ind. Ant. i, 363; see also xii, 12).

[3] Objections to this were raised by Dr. Fleet, who said (EI, iii, 162) 'it is definitely betrayed by a character which furnishes a leading test in dealing with southern records' and which he said could not appear earlier than 804. In this he was shown to be mistaken (EC, iv, Int. 6), and Dr. Bühler (Ind. Pal. §29, B2) remarked to the same effect. Dr. F's reply (EI, vi, 79) was—'I concede that this instance adduced by Mr. Rice is to be referred probably to the 6th century A.D. But it has nothing to do with the matter that we have in hand. It is a Grantha character.' It was then pointed out (EC, vi, Int. 30) that even supposing it was Grantha, the letter was undoubtedly the same, as Tamil had no aspirated letters. Dr. Bühler also (l.c. §31, A B6) refers it to the Kanarese-Telugu script.

[4] Regarding a discrepancy in the week-day and nakshatra, Dr. Bhandarkar says (Ind. Ant. i, 363):—Finding that Māgh śuddha 5th S. 388 fell on Wednesday, I submitted the question to Prof. Keru Lakshman Chatre. He finds the day to fall on 'Wednesday, Budhavāra or Saumyavāra, nakshatra Uttara-Bhādrapada', (mantri) of Akālavarsha Pṛithuvī-Vallabha (a Rāshṭrakūṭa king), having obtained from Avinīta-mahādhirāja by grant the village named Badaneguppe, situated in the Eḍenāḍ Seventy of the Pūnāḍ Six Thousand, gave it, together with the rights pertaining to six included villages, to the Śrīvijaya Jina temple of Talavana-nagara (Talakāḍ), along with certain other privileges and lands (adding considerably to the value of the donation).

The grant is thus ascribed to the time of Avinīta, and the date given, which is equivalent to 466 A.D., agrees with the history as we now know it, for Avinīta reigned from c. 430 to 482, this long reign being due to the fact, stated in many inscriptions, that he was crowned while an infant on his mother's lap.

But farther clear historical allusions in the plates require us to show that two other kings belonged to the same period, namely, Akālavarsha, undoubtedly a Rāshṭrakūṭa, and Kṛishṇavarmmā, a Kadamba. Of these, the former may be recognized as follows to have been contemporary with Avinīta. For, as I was the first to point out, the varsha titles of the Rāshṭrakūṭa kings were so constant that the title is a sufficient guide to the king's name. Akālavarsha is thus synonymous with a Kṛishṇa-Rāja.

Now it so happens that coins of a Kṛishṇa-Rāja have been found at Dēvalānā in the Nasik District and other parts of Bombay, which, as Professor Rapson says (Indian Coins, 27), have been attributed to a Rāshṭrakūṭa king of this name, c. 375–400 A.D. But he considers this date too early for the style of the coins, which are imitated from the latest Gupta coins current in this locality. For the same reason, he says, it is impossible to place them as late as the better known Kṛishṇa-Rāja Rāshṭrakūṭa, c. 750 A.D. Dr. Fleet suggested (DKD 296, 385) that they may be Kalachuri coins of Kṛishṇa-Rāja, the father of Śaṅkaragaṇa (apparently about 570 A.D.). But the Kalachuri coins have quite a different device. Accepting the coins, therefore, as Rāshṭrakūṭa, 466 as a date for the Kṛishṇa-Rāja of whom we are in search seems to satisfy the required conditions and supply the wanted intermediate figure. Sir Walter Elliot says (Coins of So. Ind. 149) 'General Cunningham's ascription of these coins to Kṛishṇa-Rāja Rāshṭrakūṭa is confirmed.'

As to the relations subsisting in this, the 5th century, between the Rāshṭrakūṭas and Gangas, and other contemporary powers, we have the following evidence. The Siragunda stone (Cm 50) says that Nirvvinīta's (i.e. Avinīta's) younger son was crowned with the Koṅgaṇi diadem by Kāḍuveṭṭi[1] (or the Pallava king) and the Vallava (Ballaha or Rāshṭrakūṭa) king[2]. This we may account for by the statement (in Bn 141, Mi 110, and DB 68) that Avinīta, acting on the advice of his own guru, had set aside Durvvinīta (from the succession) in favour of another son, but that Lakshmī (the goddess of sovereignty) of her own accord came and embraced his broad chest. Then, (in Nr 35) Durvvinīta is said to have captured Kāḍuveṭṭi on the field of battle and placed his own daughter's son Jayasimha-Vallabha on his hereditary throne.

and considers that the engraver, being careless, has written Sōma for Saumya. Nakshatra Svāti never falls near 5th Māgh śuddha, but the astrologer consulted, he thinks, may have carelessly taken Māgh vadha, and given Svāti, which falls only a day in advance of the 5th for S 388. Dr. Kielhorn's calculations (id. xxiv, 11) give the same results.

[1] Kāḍuveṭṭi or Kāḍava-Rāya is the common designation in Mysore inscriptions for the Pallava king. The former name survives in Kārvēṭi-nagara, in the North Arcot District.

[2] This rendering has been suggested by Mr. Narasimhachar (MAR, 1912), and he points out the interesting parallel occurrence, some centuries later, when the Ganga king Śivamāra-Saigoṭṭa, after his release from captivity, was crowned with their own hands by the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Gōvinda Prabhūtavarsha and the Pallava king Nandivarmmā, as related in Yd 60 and Nl 60. The proposed identification of Jayasimha is also due to him.

Now Jayasimha-Vallabha is the name given in the Aihole inscription (EI, vi, 1) as that of the Chālukya prince who, in the Yewūr, Kauthem and other grants (IA, xii, 12; xvi, 15), is said to have gained a footing for the Chalukyas by subduing a Rāshṭrakūṭa king named Indra, the son of Kṛishṇa. If we may identify these two Jayasimhas as the same person, it follows that he had a Ganga mother and a Chalukya father. But it must be admitted that the Gangas (who were of the Solar race) nowhere claim such a connection with the Chalukyas (who were of the Lunar race), unless we are to understand the solitary statement (MAR, 1912) that Durvvinīta was of the Kṛishṇa-kula[1] (and therefore Lunar race) as making such a claim at this particular period (perhaps through his mother). In any case, a Rāshṭrakūṭa Kṛishṇa here also appears in contact with the Gangas at this time.

Putting together the various coincident items, the following appears to have been the state of affairs. The Ganga king Avinīta (whose mother was a Kadamba princess, the sister of Kṛishṇavarmmā) married the Punnāḍ Rāja's daughter, and had by her his son Durvvinīta. This son he set aside (from the succession) in favour of another son (no doubt born of a different mother), and the latter obtained the Koṅgaṇi (or Ganga) crown from (or with the support of) the Pallava and Rāshṭrakūṭa kings. Nevertheless, Lakshmī (the goddess of sovereignty) came to Durvvinīta of her own accord, and he on his part entered into alliance with the Chalukya prince, giving him his daughter in marriage. The son born of this union was Jayasimha-Vallabha. Durvvinīta next seized Kāḍuveṭṭi (the Pallava king) on the field of battle and placed Jayasimha-Vallabha on his hereditary throne. And he in his turn made good the Chalukya supremacy for the time being by defeating the Rāshṭrakūṭa, the son of Kṛishṇa, but was eventually, it appears, slain in an encounter with Trilōchana-Pallava.

It is clear, as Dr. Bühler remarked, that Rāshṭrakūṭas ruled in the Dekhan in the 3rd to the 5th centuries. And I may add that although no other evidence has yet come to light that the Kṛishṇa-Rāja Rāshṭrakūṭa of that period was called Akālavarsha, the family custom was no doubt adhered to. This identification, if it could be accepted, Dr. Fleet admitted, would of course be a strong argument in favour of the genuine antiquity of the Mercara plates.

As regards the Kadamba king Kṛishṇavarmmā, we are introduced in Bl 121 to two so named in that family. The first was the great-grandfather of the second, the donor of the grant, which is dated only in the regnal year. The first Kṛishṇavarmmā is described as performer of the horse sacrifice, and as having married the daughter of Kaikeya, by whom he had a son Vishṇuvarmmā. The latter is the donor in Kd 162, which is also dated only in the regnal year. Here too his father is said to have performed the horse sacrifice, and besides to have had an elder brother Śāntivaravarmmā. This is another form of the name Śāntivarmmā, who was the son of Kākustha according to the Tālagunda pillar (Sk 176; EI, viii, 24). Kākustha is there said to have given his daughters in marriage to the Gupta and other kings. This there can be no doubt, as previously said, refers to Samudra-Gupta, who is the only Gupta known to have made an expedition to the South, as recorded on the pillar at Allahabad. Now Samudra-Gupta belongs to the latter part of the 4th century. Kākustha's younger son Kṛishṇavarmmā may therefore be placed in the first part of the 5th century, and his sister could naturally be the mother of Avinīta, who was ruling from about 430.

[1] Here, of course, the god Krishna. See also a similar claim for the Changālvas, p. xiii.

It has thus been shown that both Akālavarsha Rāshṭrakūṭa and Kṛishṇavarmmā Kadamba can be accounted for as belonging to the period of Avinīta Koṅgaṇi, the Ganga king. The direct and unaffected way in which they are mentioned in the plates, without any boast or demonstration, bears on the face of it the aspect of truth, and cannot have been intended in any way to deceive or mislead. The plates are consequently so far justified as valid and reliable records.

The first Kṛishṇa or Kannara Akālavarsha of the Rāshṭrakūṭa or Raṭṭa line previously known to us occupied the throne in about 760 A.D., and the earliest Rāshṭrakūṭa inscriptions that have been found in Mysore are of the time of his son, Jagattunga Prabhūtavarsha Śrīvallabha, or Gōvinda II (Cl. 33, 34). This is the king mentioned by Jinasēna as then ruling in the South in his Jain Harivaṁśa, composed in 783.

Akālavarsha's minister, the donor of our grant under consideration, does not give us his own name, nor any other particulars regarding himself. He may therefore have retired from public service, and taken up his residence in the Mysore country, possibly at Talakāḍ, the Ganga capital, where he made the grant. He may even have been a Mysorean, come back to end his days in his own country. Badaneguppe, the subject of the grant, still exists under the same name, and some of the other villages mentioned can be identified (see note to translation).

The plates were engraved by Viśvakarmma, which we know from other instances was a common official designation for the court engraver. It occurs as far back as the 3rd century as that of the engraver of the Kadamba grant on the Malavaḷḷi pillar (Sk 264), and the older Āndhra or Śātavāhana grant of Sātakarṇṇi which precedes it on the same pillar may also have been engraved by the same. Many of the Ganga grants on copper plates were engraved by a Viśvakarmma at various dates wide apart.

The Pūnāḍ Six Thousand was situated in the south-west of Mysore, adjoining Coorg, and is interesting on account of its antiquity. For it is the Punnāṭa to which the Jain immigrants from the north, under Bhadrabāhu, in the 4th century B.C., took their way when their leader remained behind at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa (in the Hassan District) in expectation of his death, being waited on in his last moments by one single disciple, believed to be the distinguished Chandra-Gupta. Harishēṇa, in his Bṛihatkathākōśa, dated in 931, says that the whole Saṅgha went by the guru's direction to the Punnāṭa country, situated in the South.[1] It is further mentioned in the 2nd century A.D., by Ptolemy as Pounnata, 'where is beryl.' In the 5th century the Ganga king Avinīta married the Punnāḍ Rāja's daughter, and the province thus came to be annexed to Gangavāḍi under their son Durvvinīta. Jinasēna, before mentioned, was of the Bṛihat-Punnāṭa-saṅgha. An inscription of the Punnāḍ Rājas[2] gives Kitthipura as their capital, which is identified (Hs 56) with Kittūr on the Kabbani river in the Heggaḍadēvankōṭe tāluq.

It is strange that stone inscriptions of the time of Akālavarsha II, who ruled from 884 to 913, have been found in the Dēvanhaḷḷi tāluq (Dv 42, 43), relating to a local Punnāḍ, a village circle which, in a neighbouring inscription of the 14th century (DB 38), is described as the Punnāḍ Seventy. The correspondence in names is singular, but there is otherwise no apparent connection with the incidents in the Mercara plates.

The Ganga lineage, as first brought to our knowledge in these plates, begins with Koṅgaṇi-mahādhirāja, whose son was Mādhava-mahādhirāja, whose son was Harivarmmamahādhirāja, whose son was Vishṇugōpa-mahādhirāja, whose son was Mādhava-mahādhirāja, whose son, by a princess who was the sister of the Kadamba king Kṛishṇavarmma-mahādhirāja (and probably a daughter of the Kadamba king Kākustha), was Koṅgaṇi-mahādhirāja, named Avinīta. The descriptive epithets applied to each of these kings, though novel at the time the plates were first deciphered by me, are now familiar enough from their repetition in so many Ganga inscriptions that have since been obtained.

The next three inscriptions, in order of date, are also Ganga and Jain, but on stone,[1] as are all the rest. The date of the first is 809 Śaka (888 A.D.), the 18th year of the reign of Satyavākya-Koṅguṇivarmma-dharmma-mahārājādhirāja, lord of Kovalālapura, lord of Nandagiri (Nandidroog). The king, who is described as the Permmanaḍi, gave to a Jain priest, for the Satyavākya-Jina temple of the Penne-kaḍaṅga, the twelve hamlets of Biliūr in Peddoṛegare, or the bank of the Peddoṛe or Beddoṛe. This name, meaning the big river, is generally the designation of the river Krishṇā in Kannaḍa inscriptions, but here it means the Lakshmaṇtīrtha, which is still called the Doḍḍa-hoḷe or big river in Coorg. Among the witnesses are named the officials of the Ninety-six Thousand, that is Gangavāḍi, and of the Beddoṛegare Seventy, the village circle aforesaid. Among the guardians or trustees we have those of the Male Thousand (the hill country), and the Five Hundred.[2] The grant was engraved by Sedōja.

The donor was the Ganga king Rājamalla or Rāchamalla Satyavākya II, who reigned from 870 to 907. His nephew Ereyappa was at one time governor of the Koṅgal-nāḍ Eight Thousand (Hs 92), which, as will be seen farther on, may have included the Yēḷusāvira or Seven Thousand country in the north of Coorg. The title Permmanaḍi or Permmānaḍi, also written Permmāḍi, was first assumed by the Ganga king Śrīpurusha, who reigned from 726 to 776, and is applied to all his successors. According to Nr 35 it previously belonged to the Pallavas, but on Śrīpurusha's crushing defeat of (the Pallava) Kāḍuveṭṭi of Kāñchī, he took away from him this title. After the Ganga power was overthrown in 1004, the Noḷambas, who represented the Pallavas, resumed the title (Dg 71).

The mention of the Penne-kaḍaṅga is of considerable interest, as shewing the antiquity of the kaḍaṅgas or war trenches found in a great part of Coorg. They are carried over hills, woods and comparatively flat country for miles and miles, at some places branching off in various directions or encircling hill-tops. Some are nearly 40 feet from summit to bottom of ditch, and often taken along hill sides with an angle of 80° to the horizon. In the Mendalanāḍ they show great regularity and are broad and deep, the lower side of the ditch facing the open country, but in Kiggaṭ-nāḍ they are of smaller dimensions. There is no doubt that they were war trenches, and may have served as covered ways, but it is more than probable that at the same time they formed, at least to some extent, also the boundaries between the different nāḍs. Similar earthworks were constructed by the ancient Britons. Mr. Wilkins, in an article[3] headed "Were the Ancient Britons savages?" says—'They are extremely difficult of access from the steepness of the mountain heights on which they were formed. This difficulty the primitive engineer greatly increased by the most simple and natural means. He sunk one or more deep trenches round the summit of the hill and raised lofty banks with the excavated

[1] The versions of these published by the Rev. F. Kittel in Ind. Ant. vi, 99 ff. are not trustworthy, as they contain many errors (see xiv, 76).

[2] The Five Hundred, here and in No. 4, may be the Five Hundred Svāmis of Āryyāvale or Ayyāvale (now Aihole, in the Bijapur District), regarded as the heads of the vīra-Baṇanju-dharma, or merchant class.

soil. Undoubtedly this is the most ancient species of rampart known ; it existed ages before the use of mural fortifications, and originated in all probability with the nations of the east.'

Then follows No. 3, which is of the time of the same king, but undated. It records the binding on of the Permmāḍi-paṭṭa (by euphony vaṭṭa) on the son of a gāvuṇḍa or farmer, and the fixing of the land rent and rice dues in permanence for the estate or kalnāḍ granted him. The inscription was engraved by Sōmayya. The paṭṭa was a golden band or ribbon to be worn on the forehead, inscribed with some title of honour, in this case that of the king. It was a symbol of royalty, but also conferred as a mark of royal favour. Kalnāḍ was the term generally applied to the portion of land granted for public services, or to the family of a man who fell in war.

Here intervene three fragmentary Ganga inscriptions, Nos. 60, 74 and 28. The first, which is without date, records the grant of a village to apparently Ereyarasa for an agrahāra, and also a grant by a man who, with other names, bore that of Koṅgaṇivarmmā. It may belong to about 900 A.D. The second, also without date, records the death of one of Ereyapa's followers. The third is dated in Śaka 866 (944 A.D.). It is a memorial of self-sacrifice, such as are recorded in several instances during the Ganga and later periods. A man named Būchaga had himself beheaded in fulfilment of a vow, and his mother set up this monument to him. These vows of self-immolation were taken with the object of securing the accomplishment of some cherished desire. Thus, Sb 479 informs us of a man who, in about 991, gave up his head to a goddess at Hayve in order that the king Śāntivarmmā might have a son. In 1050 a servant had his head cut off in order to die with the king Pompala (Ct 31). In 1123 a cowherd vowed his head to swing before the god at Koṇḍasa-bhāvi if the king should have a son (Sk 246). Other instances are mentioned in my Mysore and Coorg from the Inscriptions, ch. iv. The mode in which these decapitations took place was as follows, as represented in sculptured stones. The votary was seated with his back to a tall elastic rod fixed in the ground behind. This was forcibly bent down over the head of the victim and made fast by a hook to the top-knot of hair. On being severed from the body, the head flew up, carried with the rebound of the rod released from its tension.

No. 4 is another Ganga inscription, dated in Śaka 899 (978 A.D.). It is also of the time of a Satyavākya-Koṅgiṇivarmma-dharmma-mahārājādhirāja, lord of Kōlālapura, lord of Nandagiri, whose name was Rāchamalla-Permmanaḍi. But this was Satyavākya IV, and his younger brother Rakkasa, who, along with other epithets, has that of aṇṇana-baṇṭa (elder brother's warrior), was governor of Beddoṛegare (see No. 2 above). A Jain priest, whose spiritual descent is given, a resident of Śrī-Belgoḷa (Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa) acquired possession of Perggadūr (Peggūr where the inscription is), and the posa-vāḍaga or new trench, secure against obstruction. The witnesses include the officials of the Ninety-six Thousand and of the Peddoṛegare Seventy. Among the guardians or trustees are the four Malepas or hill chiefs, and the Five hundred[1]. The grant is apparently described as Śrīpurusha-mahārāja's gift[2]. If this be correct, the king must have reverted to the use of an ancestral popular name. It was engraved by Chandanandiyayya, and is called the śāsana of the basaḍi (or Jain temple) of Perggadūr.

[1] See note, p. 8.

[2] This name has come up in the most recent impression, and is well known as that of a Ganga king who ruled 726 to 776 A.D., but has not been hitherto met with subsequent to that period. In the impression in my first edition and in that given in Ind. Ant. vi, 102, it is clearly Śrīpurada mahārāja, the mahārāja of Śrīpura, perhaps the Sirivur mentioned in No. 65. A very slight change is required to turn Śrīpurada into Śrīpurusha.

The date of this inscription requires some explanation. It is given as the Nandīśvara-talpa-devasam of Phālguṇa-śukla-paksha. According to information from a Jain source, it appears that Nandīśvara is the name of an island in the Jain cosmography, the eighth from Jambu-dvīpa. A plan of it on stone or brass is kept in many Jina temples, and a Nandīśvara temple in conformity with the plan has, it is said, been lately erected by the Jains in Delhi. From the 8th of the bright fortnight in the months Āshāḍha, Kārttika and Phālguna, till full moon, is the time of the Nandīśvara-pūjā, or observance of the season when certain deified beings—Saudharmēndra, Īśānēndra, Chāmara and Vairōchana—assemble for worship at the island of Nandīśvara, which has fifty-two Jina temples on it. These are also the approved times for the commencement of any religious vows. The authorities for these statements may be found in Trilōkasāra and in Nandīśvara-bhakti. The date of our inscription must therefore be taken as Phālguna śukla 8, the beginning of the Nandīśvara days in that month.

The title of aṇṇana-baṇṭa given to the prince Rakkasa is also used with regard to him in SB 60. In Sp 59 we have an inscription of the same Rakkasa-Ganga Rāchamalla when on the throne, on which he succeeded his elder brother. He was the patron of the Kannaḍa poet Nāgavarmmā, the first of that name, author of the Chhandōmbudhi, who, in the introduction of his work, has verses relating to himself, beginning arasam Rakkasa-Gangam, found in the several palm leaf copies.[1]

The term vādaga is used in mentioning the new trench, instead of kaḍaṅga, but it refers to the same thing. From this inscription and No. 10 it is evident that a close connection existed between the Jains of Coorg and those of Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa in Mysore. The four Malepas or hill chiefs were no doubt at the head of the Male Thousand mentioned in No 2. The Hoysaḷa kings have the title Maleparoḷ-gaṇḍa or Malaparoḷ-gaṇḍa, meaning champion among the Malepas, but who in particular are intended does not appear. With regard to Śrīpura, this is the name of a place where a Jain temple is stated to have been erected in the Dēvarhaḷḷi plates (Ng 85). It also occurs in the Hosūr plates (Gb 47). From the latter it may be conjectured that it was near Gūḍaḷūr, which is at the western foot of the Nilgiris on the Wynaad boundary. But this is uncertain. A Sirivūr is mentioned in No. 65, which would be in Coorg.

The next inscription (No. 5) is dated in Śaka 921 (1000 A.D.) and is of the time of the last Gaṅga king, though no mention is made of any king. It refers to a man who had served his time with Kuṇindora, which may be the name of one of the Coorg houses, and thus furnish evidence of their antiquity. He then set up for himself, and to expiate any guilt in taking forcible possession of certain places (named), bathed in the stream, and worshipping Rāmēśvara, made a grant of land for dharma or charity.

As the Ganga inscriptions in Coorg end here, it may be useful for reference to give a table of the whole of the kings, based on the information that has now been obtained from a host of inscriptions in Mysore and surrounding countries, the Mercara plates (No. 1) having been the first that brought the dynasty to light. Further particulars will be found in my work Mysore and Coorg from the Inscriptions, published by Constable & Co., London, in 1909.

1 For reasons unknown the Rev. F. Kittel has omitted these in his edition called Nāgavarma's Canarese Prosody, published at Mangalore in 1875, but refers to them in his Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, under Ganga and Ajitasēna.

[1] This name is applied to all the kings to the end. The Tamil chronicle Koṅgudēśa-rājākkaḷ says that he was ruling in 189 and reigned for 51 years.

[2] In the same Tamil chronicle 288 is given as a date in his reign.

[3] In addition to the grants of his reign mentioned in my Mysore and Coorg from the Inscriptions, one has since been discovered at Melekōṭe in the Tumkūr tāluq, which is unique in being made to a Buddhist (MAR. 1910). From the mention of the Avaniya-nadi among the boundaries, the site of the grant seems to have been in the neighbourhood of the old religious centre named Avani, in the Mulbāgal tāluq of the Kolar district. Unfortunately one plate is missing, which may have contained the date.

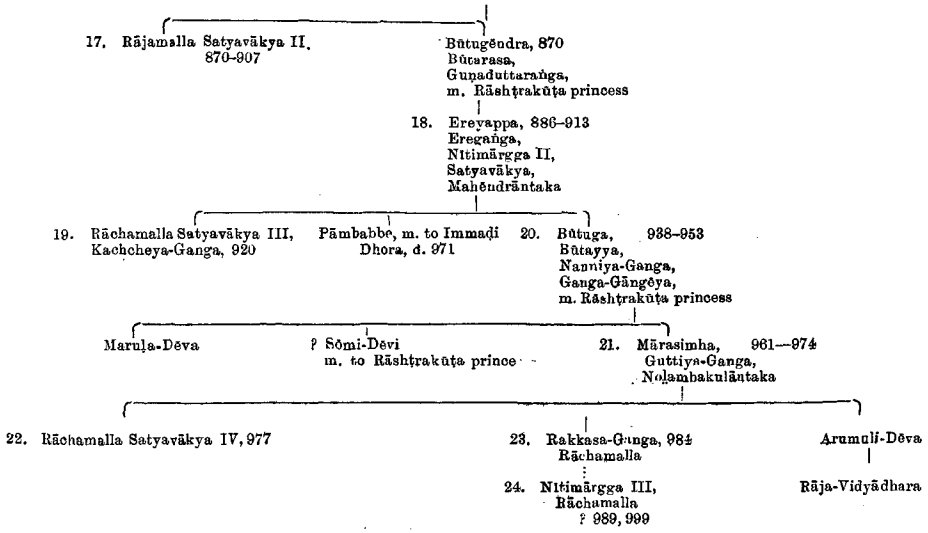
[4] At this point, between Mādhava III and Avinīta, the Tamil chronicle inserts a Diṇḍikara-Rāja or Hariśchandra, who ruled for only a short time. An inscription containing the name of Diṇḍika-Rāja has lately been discovered at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, engraved in characters like those of the Bhadrabāhu inscription SB 1. (MAR. 1909).

[5] More recently a grant of his 40th year has been obtained, at Gummareḍḍipura, Śrīnivāspur tāluq (MAR. 1912), which contains fresh information of importance. It states that he was himself the author of a Śabdāvatāra, and of a version in Sanskrit of the Vaḍḍakathā, which, from the corresponding passage in Tm 23, apparently means the Bṛihatkathā.

[6] This title is used of all the subsequent kings, often alone, without any name.

[7] These names are used as titles by all the kings that come after.

[8] This name is used as a title by the kings that follow.



Chōḷas

The Ganga sovereignty was overthrown by the Chōḷas, an ancient line of kings in the Tamil country, and they became the dominant power in the south and east of Mysore and in Coorg for a little more than a hundred years. Their early capital was Oreyūr (Warriore, near Trichinopoly). But the one with which they are chiefly identified is Tanjore, and they also took the capital city Kānchī from the Pallavas. In the course of the campaigns in which they subjected the Pallavas and the Eastern Chālukyas, the latter of whom were aided by the Rāshṭrakūṭas, the Chōḷa king Parāntaka had in 921 uprooted the Bāṇas, who ruled in the east of Mysore and claimed to be friends of the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Kṛishṇa II. He then conferred the title of Bāṇādhirāja on the Ganga prince Pṛithivīpati, giving him the name Hastimalla. But the Gangas being closely allied by intermarriages with the Rāshṭrakūṭas, the Ganga king Būtuga in 949 slew, at Takkōlam (near Arkōnam), the Chōḷa king Rājāditya, who was at war with the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Kṛishṇa III. The latter, who was Būtuga's brother-in-law, rewarded him with the Banavase Twelve Thousand (the Shimoga District), and claims to have captured Kānchī and Tanjore. In 997 the Chōḷa king Rājarāja had gained a footing in the east of Mysore (Ht 111). But in 1004 his son Rājēndra-Chōḷa, who was in command of the Chōḷa army, succeeded in capturing Talakāḍ, the Ganga capital, and brought the Ganga power to an end. The conquest of all the south and east of Mysore, in an arc extending from Arkalgūḍ in the west, through Seringapatam, and north by Nelamangala to Niḍugal, was speedily effected, and Rājēndra-Chōḷa gained the title Gangaikoṇḍa-Chōḷa.[1]

In their operations westwards the Chōḷas were opposed by the Changāḷvas, who were ruling in the Huṇsūr tāluq of Mysore and in Coorg. But these were defeated in a decisive battle at Panasoge or Hanasoge on the Kāvērī, and the Changāḷvas thus came under the domination of the Chōḷas. The victory over them was due to a warrior named Manija under the general Panchavan-mahārāya. He was rewarded by the Chōḷa king Rājarāja with the title of Kshattriya -śikhāmaṇi Koṅgāḷva (Cg 46) and granted an estate at Mālavvi (now Mālambi) The Kongāḷva territory extended over the Arkalgūḍ tāluq of Mysore and the Yēḷusāvira country in the north of Coorg. Both the Chaṅgāḷva and Koṅgāḷva kings from this time have Chōḷa prenomens, denoting their subordination, and the Chōḷas in the list of their conquests include Kuḍa-malaināḍ, which indicates the Coorg hill country, Kuḍagu or Koḍagu-malenāḍ, as expressly stated in TN 122.

[1] There is a belief, I am informed by Mr. Krishna Sastri, that he obtained it through subduing various kings up to the Ganges and compelling them to bring the sacred water of the river to pour into the tank he had made at his capital Gangaigoṇḍachōḷapuram.

Chaṅgāḷvas

The Chaṅgāḷvas or Chaṅgāḷuvas are a line of kings of much interest, having ruled in the west of Mysore and in Coorg from the 10th to the 17th century. Their original territory was Chaṅga-nāḍ (Hs 97), corresponding chiefly with the Huṇsūr tāluq. They claim to be Yādavas and of the Lunar race (Hs 63, Yd 26), descended from a king named Chaṅgāḷva, who was in Dvārāvatī, and having defeated Bijjala, seized his titles. This Chaṅgāḷva cannot be traced, and there is nothing to show what Bijjala is meant. The kings are generally styled mahā-maṇḍalika maṇḍalēśvara or mahā-maṇḍalēśvara. They were originally Jains, and are first met with in connection with Panasoge or Hanasoge, on the south of the Kāvērī in the north-west of the Yeḍatore tāluq, where there are many ruined basadis. These, according to Yd 26, were set up by Rāma, the son of Daśaratha, the elder brother of Lakshmaṇa, and husband of Sītā. The Jain priests of the Hottage (or Pustaka)-gachchha claim exclusive jurisdiction over basadis at Panasoge and at Tale-Kāvērī in Coorg, which may perhaps have been the limits of the Chaṅgāḷva kingdom east and west.

One of the basadis or Jain temples at Panasoge set up by Rāma was endowed by the Ganga king Mārasimha, who reigned from 961 to 974; and was rebuilt by Nanni-Chaṅgāḷva (Yd 25). He is the first Chaṅgāḷva of whom we have any certain knowledge, and as he had the prefix Rājēndra-Chōḷa before his name he belongs to the beginning of the 11th century. But as their kingdom was subdued by the Chōḷas at the time when the Ganga power was overthrown in 1004, the Chaṅgāḷvas must have been an established line of kings prior to that. Their inscriptions are found mostly in the Huṇsūr and Yeḍatore tāluqs and in Coorg.

The subjugation of the Chaṅgāḷvas by the Chōḷas seems to have resulted from their defeat at Panasoge by the Chōḷa general Panchavan-mahārāya (Cg 46); and the subsequent kings for more than a century bore Chōḷa prenomens. When the Chōḷas were expelled from Mysore by the Hoysaḷas in 1116, the Chaṅgāḷvas strove to maintain independence. But they were compelled in the end to submit to the Hoysaḷas. And when the Hoysaḷa power was overthrown in the 14th century by Moslems from the North, the Chaṅgāḷvas passed under the dominion of the new Vijayanagar empire then established. At length they were conquered in 1644 by one of the Mysore kings,—these having risen to power after the fall of Vijayanagar—, and their dynasty was thus brought to an end.

It is difficult to draw up a consecutive table of the kings, as they are mostly mentioned only as Chaṅgāḷvas, without any individual names, down to the end of the 13th century. Nanni had the prenomen Rājēndra-Chōḷa, but his successors generally had that of Kulōttuṅga-Chōḷa, and when the Chōḷas disappeared from Mysore, seem to have used only Kulōttuṅga, without the Chōḷa. They had some time before this embraced the new Lingāyit religion and were devoted Śaivas. Their family god was now Mallikārjuṇa, whose temple was on the Beṭṭadpur hill in the Huṇsūr tāluq, and this they named Śrīgiri, no doubt after the famous Śaiva sacred hill Śrīparvata in the Karnūl District.

The following are some of the names that are met with in the earlier period, with their dates, and references to the inscriptions in which they occur :—

The inscriptions of 1034 and 1037 do not mention the name Nanni, but they no doubt belong to him, as in the latter, Panchavan-mārāya, the victor over the Chaṅgāḷvas, is said to have then bound paṭṭas, or badges of honour, on certain gāvuṇḍas. Mādēva has various epithets applied to him. Besides being entitled to the pañcha-mahā-śabda, he is styled Nigalaṅka-malla. He may be the Tribhuvanamalla of Cg 61. But the Chaṅgāḷvas were apparently lifting their heads too high. So, in about 1104, the Hoysaḷa king Ballāḷa I led an expedition against Chaṅgāḷva (Hn 162). In 1106 Annadāni is mentioned (Cg 51), but shorn of titles. He is not said to be a Chaṅgāḷva, but as their family god was called Annadāni-Mallikārjuna, he was very likely one, who built the temple for it. In ? 1124 we find Chaṅgāḷva helping the hill chiefs against the Hoysaḷa army (Bl 178). But in 1130 Vishnuvarddhana is described as a submarine fire to the ocean the Changāḷva king (Cm 137), and in 1139 the Chaṅgāḷva purāṇika had to apply to the Hoysaḷa king for confirmation of a grant (Cn 199). In 1145 Nārasimha I is said to have slain Chaṅgāḷva in battle, and seized his elephants, horses, gold and new jewels (Ng 76). In 1155 Nārasimha's general Chōkimayya brought the Chaṅga king's territory into subjection to his sovereign (Hn 69). An inscription of 1169 says of Gōvi-dēva, the younger brother of Biṭṭi-dēva, the chief of Huliyera under Nārasimha, that the wounds he inflicted with his spear on the face of the elephant on which the Chaṅgāḷuva king was seated resembled the characters of an inscription recording his own valour. In 1171 Sōvi-dēva, the Kadamba governor of Banavase, took Chaṅgāḷva prisoner and put him into irons, as he had vowed he would (Sb 345). When Nārasimha's son, the prince Ballāḷa, made a tour through the hill countries in the west, Chaṅgāḷva is named as one of the kings who was compelled to do homage to him (Bl 86). But after Ballāḷa had come to the throne, he had to send an expedition in 1174 under his general Beṭṭarasa against the Chaṅgāḷva king Mahadēva, who had retired to Coorg and fortified himself at Pālpare in Kiggaṭnāḍ. Beṭṭarasa marched there, and having destroyed him, made Pālpare the seat of his own government. But the Chaṅgāḷva Pemma-Vīrappa, perhaps Mahadēva's son, afterwards attacked him at Pālpare, aided by Bāḍaganḍa Nandi-dēva, Udeyāditya-dēva of Kuruche, and others 'the Koḍagas of all the nāḍs'. Beṭṭarasa was near being altogether worsted, but secured the victory through the devotion and bravery of one of his officers (Hs 20). This is the first express mention of the Koḍagas that has been met with in inscriptions. The Chaṅgāḷvas seem after this reverse to have submitted to the Hoysaḷas. For in 1175 we have grants made in Coorg by Ballāḷa II (Cg 65, 70).

In apparently about 1280 there is mention (Cg 27) of a Chaṅgāḷva in connection with a Munivarāditya, who seems to have been ruling in ? 1264 (Cg 75). A chief of this name is said (Cn 203) to have presented in 1223 an emerald to the Hoysaḷa king Nārasimha II, who, no doubt on account of its being of unique size and value, added it to his necklace and celebrated the event by a feast in Chūḍavāḍi (the Chūḍagrāma or Muḍiyanūr in Mulbāgal tāluq—see Mb 157), where he was at the time encamped during his campaign against Magara. This Munivarāditya must be a different person from the one in the present inscriptions, as the title in the other seems to have belonged to a chief of Mēlai (or western)-Mārāyapāḍi (in the Kaḍapa District) in 1124 (Ct 162); whereas the present Munivarāditya may more probably be connected with the Mulivarāditya-nāḍ or Munivarāditya-nāḍ mentioned in No. 45 in 1296, which was evidently in Coorg, and probably to the east of Merkara.

This last inscription was written by the sēnabōva of Kopaṇa-tīrtha, which is a place deserving of notice. It is in all probability the Kopal or Koppal, situated in Raichūr District, in the south-west of the Nizam's Dominions. It was a great sacred place or tīrtha of the Jains, and is mentioned in the 9th century by the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Nṛipatuṅga in his Kavirājamārgga as one of the four cities in which the pith of the Kannaḍa language was spoken. It is no doubt the Koppam where a sanguinary battle took place in 1052 between the Chōḷas and the Western Chālukyas. The Chōḷa king Rājādhirāja was slain, but his brother Rājēndra-Dēva took command and succeeded in putting to flight the Chāḷukya king Āhavamalla. Koppam in this connection is described as a tīrtha on the Pērār or big river, a designation generally applied to the Kṛishṇā, but here apparently referring to the Tungabhadrā. In 1113 Ganga-Rāja, the victorious general of the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇuvarddhana, is said (SB 47), by his restoration of ruined Jina temples throughout Gangavāḍi, to have made it shine like Kopaṇa. In modern times its hill fort was occupied by Ṭīpu Sultān in 1786, and rebuilt by him with the assistance of his French engineers. Sir John Malcolm pronounced it the strongest fort he had seen in India. It is now the chief place in the jāgīr of the first Sir Sālār Jung, the eminent Haidarabad minister.

In 1252, the Hoysaḷa king Sōmēśvara, who had taken up his residence at Kaṇṇanūr or Vikramapura, near Śrīraṅgam and Trichinopoly, in the Chōḷa country which he had subdued, on the death there of his Tamil wife, resolved to revisit the capital Dōrasamudra (Halebīḍ in the Hassan District). Sōma-Dēva and Boppa-Dēva, the two Chaṅgāḷvas who were jointly ruling then, came to receive him at Rāmanāthpur, which they had rebuilt in 1245 (Ag 53). This was probably the boundary of their kingdom, and the place where the king had to ford the river Kāvērī, as perhaps the epic hero Rāma had done in olden times. From the same inscription we learn that the Chaṅgāḷva capital since 1245 had been at Śrīrangapaṭṭaṇa. This does not mean Seringapatam in Mysore, but the place called Koḍagu-Śrīrangapaṭṭaṇa (see Cg 25), which is in Coorg, south of the Kāvērī near Siddapur. Malli-Dēva and his son Harihara-Dēva are mentioned in 1280 and 1297 (Bl 89, Cg 54, 55, 59). Subsequently, during the 14th century, when the Muhammadan invasions from Delhi took place, and the Hoysaḷas and other southern powers were swept away, we meet with no Chaṅgāḷvas. Nos. 67 of ?1360 and 58 of ?1380 are doubtful.

But in the 15th century the Changāḷvas again appear, and soon made their capital at Nanjarājapaṭṭaṇa or Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa, of which place they henceforward call themselves the Rājas. It still gives its name to the northern tāluq of Coorg, and is situated in Coorg, north of the Kāvērī where it turns north and becomes the common boundary of Coorg and Mysore. The following is a list of the kings in this later period. Hs 63 gives the genealogy to 1502, and Hs 24 to 1567. Mangarasa, in his Jayanṛipa-kāvya, written in about 1509, says that his father was descended from the minister of the Chaṅgāḷva kings, and that the latter derived their origin from Kṛishṇa, that is, were Yādavas.

Nanja-Rāja was the founder of Nanjarājapaṭṭaṇa or Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa, the new capital, which was named after him. Śrīkaṇṭha-Rāja seems to have been an important person, and in one case (Hs 24) is given supreme titles. This was in 1567, in his son's time. But from Hs 25 it would appear that in 1544 he was indebted to Aubhalēśvara-arasu of Nandiyāla for the grant of a palanquin, and in No. 10 of that year is not mentioned at all. Piriya-Rāja rebuilt Singapaṭṭaṇa and changed its name to Piriyapaṭṭaṇa (the Periapatam of English histories), naming it after himself (Hs 15). This seems to have been a secondary capital.

All these kings were subordinate to Vijayanagar, which was represented by a Viceroy at Seringapatam in Mysore. By Piriya-Rāja's time Vijayanagar had fallen. But there still remained a viceroy at Seringapatam, named Tirumale-Rāja, who was aged and infirm, and whose authority was waning. In 1607 he is said (Hs 36) to have made a grant of the Malalavāḍi country (in Huṇsūr tāluq) to Rudragaṇa "in order that the worship of the god Annadāni-Mallikārjuna should not fail as long as the Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa kings of the Chaṅgāḷva family continued." But Piriyapaṭṭaṇa was taken by the Mysore army in 1644, in the reign of Kaṇṭhīrava-Narasa-Rāja, and Vīra-Rājaiya fell in its defence, after putting to death his wives and children on seeing that his situation was desperate. This was the end of the Chaṅgāḷvas, who had held the throne for 600 years or more. The Mysoreans seem not to have followed up this victory into Coorg, but contented themselves with placing garrisons in Piriyapaṭṭaṇa and Beṭṭadpur. The Koḍagas may have attempted later to retake Piriyapaṭṭaṇa or Periapatam, as they are specially named in 1722 (Sr 64) among the assailants from various quarters who were defeated by the Mysore king Chikka-Dēva-Rāja.

Koṅgāḷvas

The discovery of the Koṅgāḷva line of kings is of as much interest for the history of Coorg as that of the Chaṅgāḷvas. The origin of the Koṅgāḷvas is related in Cg 46. The great Chōḷa king, the friend of the virgin daughter of Kavēra (that is, the river Kāvērī), Rājakēsarivarmma-Permmanaḍigaḷ, that is Rājarāja, on hearing that Manija had fought in the battle of Panasoge until the enemy (evidently the Chaṅgāḷvas) were overcome and slain, resolved to reward him with a paṭṭa, or diadem, and give him a nāḍ. He sent orders accordingly to his general Pañchavan-mahārāya, who bound on him a paṭṭa bearing the title Kshattriya-śikhāmani-Koṅgaḷva and gave him Mālavve (now Mālambi in Coorg). This was in 1004.

The Koṅgāḷvas ruled over a territory including the Arkalgūḍ tāluq of Mysore and the Yēḷusāvira or Seven Thousand country in the north of Coorg. It no doubt corresponded more or less with the Koṅgal-nāḍ Eight Thousand, of which the Gaṅga prince Ereyappa is said (Hs 92) to have been the governor in about 880. The Koṅgāḷvas were Jains, and had Chōḷa prefixes to their names. Their titles, as given in Ag 99, were the following:—entitled to the pañcha-mahā-śabda, mahā-maṇḍalēśvara, chief lord of the city of Oreyūr (the early Chōḷa capital near Trichinopoly), sun upon the eastern mountain the Chōḷa-kula with twisted top-knot, crest-jewel of the Sūryya-vaṁśa (or Solar race). They thus claim to be Chōḷas.

But Pañchavan-mahārāya seems to be a recognized Pāṇḍya designation. He may perhaps be the Pañchavaṇ-Brahmādirāja to whom the Chōḷa king Rājarāja granted Tagaḍūr, said to be Dharmapuri in the Salem District.[1] But there is also a Tagaḍūr in Mysore, in the Nanjangūḍ tāluq, which is described as hiriya-nāḍu and anādi-mahā-nāḍu[2]. Of Pañchavan-mahārāya we have a farther account in an inscription at Balmuri (Sr 140), dated in 1012. He is there described as a bee at the lotus feet of Rājarāja, who invested him with the rank of mahā-daṇḍanāyaka for Beṅgi-maṇḍala (the Eastern-Chālukya territory) and Gaṅga-maṇḍala (the Ganga territory in Mysore). He then claims to have led an expedition throughout the western coast region, in the course of which he seized Tuluva (South Kanara), and Koṅkaṇa (North Kanara), held Malaya (Malabar), and put to flight Chēramma (the king of Cochin or Travancore), after which he pushed aside Teluga and Raṭṭiga (countries to the north of Mysore), and coveted even the little Belvoḷa country (in Dharwar and Belgaum Districts). He is called Rājēndra-Chōḷa in Sr 125. He appears again in 1037, conferring paṭṭas or badges of honour on various gāvuṇḍas or farmers (Hg 104). After Rājēndra-Chōḷa in 1022 had attacked the Poysaḷa king Nṛipa-Kāma (Mj 43), Rājēndra-Chōḷa-Koṅgāḷva also attacked him in 1026, when he claims to have gained a victory at Manni (Ag 76).

His son was Rājādhirāja-Koṅgāḷva (Cg 38), who, and his mother Pōchabbarasi, had as their guru Guṇasēna-paṇḍita[3], who was the disciple of Pushpasēna-siddhānta-dēva (Cg 35, 37, 38, 41). Guṇasēna had the Nāga well dug at Muḷḷūr in about 1050 (Cg 42), and died in 1064 (Cg 34). Of the same period are the following:—Cg 56, recording the death in ?1044 of Prabhāchandra-dēva, the disciple of Śubhachandra-dēva; and Cg 31, stating that Jakkiyabbe, the wife of Ēḍayya, resolved to obtain mukti by the performance of sannyasanam and expired in about 1050. There is also a notice in Cg 39 that Rājādhirāja-Koṅgāḷva had set up and endowed a temple in memory of his mother Pōchabbarasi, through the agency of Rugmiṇi-Dēvi's queen's body-guard, which was at a later period restored, in 1390, when the Vijayanagar king Vira-Harihara, having read the deed making the grant, resolved to carry it on and granted Muḷḷūr-nāḍ to Gonka-Ṟaḍḍi-nāyaka, whose bravery had been noted by (the commander) Guṇḍappa-daṇḍanāyaka.

In 1058 a Rājēndra-Koṅgāḷva appears (Cg 35), presumably Rājādhirāja-Koṅgāḷva's son. He was apparently succeeded by the king whose name was Aḍaṭarāditya, with the titles

[1] Mad. No. 204 of 1909. [2] Nj 117, 115

[3] He was of the Draviḷa-gaṇa (Nos. 34, 35, 36) or Tiruḷa-gaṇa (Nos. 37)—both names meaning Tamil In Kannaḍa they take the form Draviḍa and Tiguḷa.

Rājēndra-Pṛithuvī-Koṅgāḷva and Tribhuvanamalla-Chōḷa Koṅgāḷva. His dates run from 1066 to 1100, and he seems to have been a powerful ruler. One of his inscriptions (Ag 99) was composed by the minister for peace and war, named Nakulāryya, who boasts of being able to write in four languages. Which these were is not stated, but Nakulāryya is a form of the name Lakula, that of a famous Śaiva teacher, the original of whom seems to have lived very early in the Christian era.[1] Cg 44 is a memorial of Uttama-Chōḷa-Seṭṭi, who, in about 1080, appears to have taken his life by cutting off his head, no doubt in accordance with some vow of self-sacrifice.

A Vīra-Chōḷa-Koṅgāḷva is the last of whom we have a record. In an inscription of ? 1176 (Cg 33) he made—in the presence of the queen mother Padmala-Dēvi, Sōmala-Dēvi and others,—a grant of the customs-dues of the Muḷḷūr-nāḍ Seventy, the country around Muḷḷūr, near Śanivārsante. Padmala-Dēvi was the queen of the Hoysaḷa king Vīra-Ballāḷa II and mother of the next king Nārasimha II. Sōmala-Dēvi was her daughter, a princess noted for her beauty and virtue. The Koṅgāḷvas seem thus to have been recognized by the Hoysaḷas, and Koṅgāḷva is mentioned along with Chaṅgāḷva in Bl 86 as coming to do homage to Ballāḷa. But they did not long survive the Chōḷa ascendancy in Coorg and the south of Mysore. In 1296 the Chaṅgāḷvas were evidently (Cg 45) in possession of Muḷḷūr. But Cg 39 shows that in 1390 a Jain priest restored a temple formerly set up there by the Koṅgāḷva king and recovered the endowments, which it is believed are continued even now. Meanwhile at that same date, the Vijayanagar king Harihara II made the grant of Muḷḷūr-nāḍ, as above mentioned, to Gonka-Ḍaḍḍi-nāyaka, through his general Guṇḍappa-daṇḍanāyaka. The exploits of this Guṇḍa-daṇḍanātha are extensively praised in Bl 3.

Hoysaḷas

The struggles of the Chaṅgāḷvas against the Hoysaḷas, and the establishment of the supremacy of the latter, have been described above. But the only inscriptions of the Hoysaḷas in Coorg itself, directly attributed to them, are Nos. 65 and 70, 6 and 7. The first two are of the time of Ballāḷa II, dated in 1175; the other two of the time of Nārasimha III, dated in 1255 and 1285. They are all in the north. No. 65 is at Siraha in the Bilaha hōbli (called in the inscription Biluhu-nāḍ), and records a grant for the god Mallikārjuna of Sirivūr. No. 70 is at Heggaḍahaḷḷi in the Kanime hōbli, and the subject of it is effaced. Nos. 6 and 7 are at Niḍuta on the north-eastern frontier, and are bīragal or vīragal, memorials to warriors slain in battle. The village of Kahigōḍ mentioned in them is now bēchirākh, or deserted, and is situated in the Arkalgūḍ tāluq of the Hassan District of Mysore, on the opposite side of the Kāvērī to Kṛishṇarājkaṭṭe. There are several similar memorial stones there, of the same period and relating to the same persons (Ag 37 to 40). These and the records of the preceding paragraph above show that the Hoysaḷa king and members of the royal family were at this time in the north of Coorg, in consequence perhaps of the decisive defeat of the Chaṅgāḷvas in the battle of Pālpare.

There is one inscription (Cg 40), dated in 1216, which belongs to the Hoysaḷa period, but the name of the only king mentioned in it is effaced. All that can be read is Immaḍi-A....Rāya. Who this may have been it is impossible to say. Immaḍi means 'the second'. There was an Annadāni apparently among the Chaṅgāḷvas, but no other name of a king at about that time in any line begins with A. From the inscription being at Muḷḷūr, and evidently Jain, one would be disposed to class it as Koṅgāḷva, and there was a king in that line named Adaṭarāditya. But there is no reason to suppose that the Koṅgālvas continued till then.

[1] See JRAS for 1907, p. 419.

The inscription records the death of a Vidyādhara Būchidēvarasa, who is described as Immaḍi-A....Rāya's kaṭakāchārya, or as we might say, 'army chaplain'. He was the Jain priest to the camp or capital, but what were his functions does not appear. Kēśirāja, the author of the standard Kannaḍa grammar named Śabdamaṇi-darpaṇa, in like manner calls himself the Yādava-kaṭakāchārya.

King Bōdharūpa

Probably belonging to the 14th century, when the Hoysaḷa power had been overthrown by Muhammadan invasions from the north, and the Chaṅgāḷvas were not in evidence in Coorg, we have two inscriptions in Tamil characters (Nos. 8 and 9), the only ones in Coorg so written. They are—the first, in the temple at Pālūr, and the second, at Bhāgamaṇḍala,[1] a sacred spot near the source of the river Kāvērī, called in the inscription the Bhagaṇḍāśrama, where the Kanake, its first tributary, unites with the Kāvērī, which emerges here from its course for some distance underground. They record grants made by a king named Bōdharūpa Bhagavar. He was a disciple of Avidyāmṛityu-bhaṭṭāraka of the Purushōttama-parshad (or synod), of which we know nothing more. The donor might possibly be identified with the ruler of Durga, now known as Mahārājdurga, in the south-west of the Hassan tāluq of Mysore. For in an inscription from Rudrapaṭṇa (Mg 87) we have a Bōdha-mahādēva on the throne of Durga in the time of Bukka-Rāya of Vijayanagar, in 1371, and this seems the most likely period of these two Coorg inscriptions. But unfortunately it is not altogether reliable, being on an alleged copper plate which was not forthcoming. The published version is from a manuscript copy furnished by the people of the village. On the other hand, grounds might be adduced for placing them in the beginning of the 11th century, the period of the Chōḷa conquest. But against this is the absence of any mention of the Chōḷas. Our information regarding the Durga principality, again, is very meagre, but its capital may have been Pālya, to the north of the hill. Compare with this the Pālayūr or Pālūr where the first grant was made.

The opening portion of both records is in Sanskrit verse. The continuation has been represented as being in the Tulu language, but this needs verification. It contains many Tamil terms.[2]

Of these two inscriptions, which have several features in common, No. 8 is a grant for Pālayūr Mahādēva (Śiva). The duty of maintaining it is laid upon the Śrīvaishṇavas, the Valañjiyar (or merchants), the arm-bearing Thousands, and the Brāhmaṇs,—all being described as of the Eighteen countries, which are not specified. A grant (TN 35, as completed[3]) made in the 20th year of the Chōḷa king Rājarāja, 1004 A.D., is similarly placed under the protection of the Śrīvaishṇavas. This designation, therefore, existed before Rāmānuja, with whom the sect of Śrīvaishṇava Brāhmaṇs is supposed to have originated, early in the 12th century. Similarly also, grants made at Āvani in 1185 (Mb 45,49b) are committed to the protection of the Valañjiyar (or merchants). The reference to the arm-bearing Thousands may be compared with 'the great army of the Right-hand of the Eighteen countries,

[1] This stone is cracked transversely across the middle, said to be due to the followers of Ṭīpu Sulṭān. For the first impressions of these two inscriptions I was indebted to Mr. Gustav Haller. But better ones were afterwards obtained through Mr. Krishna Śāstri.

[2] For the decipherment of the vernacular portion I have to thank Mr. Narasimhāchār, who says:—'The characters are a jumble of Grantha, Malayāḷam, Tamil, and a few Vaṭṭeḻuttu. There is no doubt about portions being in Tamil, but other portions are in a language which is neither Malayāḷam nor Tulu, but is related to them. I think the inscriptions are older than 1400 A.D. Some of the characters appear to go back to the 11th century'. Mr. Krishna Śāstri has also rendered good assistance in the interpretation.

armed with great weapons', mentioned in 1072 in the time of Rājēndra-Chōḷa (Mb 49a, 119). The Right- and Left- hand factions are composed of agricultural, artisan and trading classes, divided into these two violently opposed camps. The institution is ancient, but its origin is obscure. So far as can be seen, it was a conflict of home industrial classes with outsiders from other parts. The Brāhmaṇs are then lastly named as custodians. It would seem therefore that the four orders of Hindūs,—Brāhmaṇs, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Śūdras—are intended. The penalties for neglect are somewhat peculiar.

In No. 9 we are supplied with certain astronomical data, but they are insufficient for calculation. This grant implies that it was made after the one at Pālūr, though doubtless at about the same time. Moreover the original is stated in it to have been engraved on a copper plate. Of this there is now no trace. Bōdharūpa was associated with others, not named, in making the grant. A chief named Mēlpūṇḍi Kunniyarasa was ruling the nāḍ. What nāḍ is not stated. but 'this' nāḍ is mentioned farther on as being under the rule of the king who ordered the grant. The rest of the inscription prescribes the offerings to be made, and the penalties for neglect. The arm-bearing Thousands of the Eighteen countries and the Valañjiyar are here charged to guard the temple. For whatever is omitted, reference is to be made to the treasury register and the copper plate. It was written (or engraved) by Pakaṇḍala-āyāri. The Pālūr temple is now said to be dedicated to Mahālingēśvara, and that at Bhāgamaṇḍala to Bhagaṇḍēśvara, but it also has shrines to Vishṇu, Subrahmaṇya, Kinammaṇi, and Gaṇapati.

Munivarāditya Gōkula-Dēvarasa

Another local potentate appears at about this period in No. 75, which is dated only in the cyclic year and may belong to 1264. It contains some unusual items of interest. He was a maha-maṇḍalēśvara named Vīra-Munivarāditya Gōkula-dēvarasa[1], and is described as subduer of Chaüṭu, and supporter of Satyarāya (whoever they were). During his rule, there was a cattle raid by the Tengu-nāḍaka, who seized the cows of Yalaghali. The wife of his brave retainer Mēlaḷi (who was no doubt absent at the time) was so furious at this outrage that she wrestled with the marauder, overpowered and threw him down, and tied his legs with a rope. For this plucky deed, Bidaḍe, as she seems to have been named, was rewarded with a nose jewel.

The Nava Dannāyaks

On the fall of the Hoysaḷa kingdom there ensued a period of interregnum which invited attempts on the part of aspirants for power. One such was connected with the Nava Dannāyaks of Kōṭe or Beṭṭadakōṭe in the south of Mysore, where they occupied the Gōpālasvāmi hill. They seem to have been descendants from a great minister under Ballāḷa III, named Perumāḷa-dannāyaka. His son Mādhava-dannāyaka was governor of Padinālknāḍ[2] in the south of Mysore in 1318 (Ch 103, Gu 56), and had his residence at Terakaṇāmbi in the Gundalpet tāluq (Gu 58). He was followed by his son Kētaya-dannāyaka, ruling in 1321 (Gu 69), and by Siṅgeya-dannāyaka, ruling in 1338 (Hs 82). They call themselves lords of Svastipura, which is not identified.

The Nava Dannāyaks were nine brothers, the chief of whom was called Perumāḷ-dannāyak. Tradition says that four of them, headed by Bhīma-dannāyak, quarrelled with the [1] See above, p. 15. He may be connected with the Gōpāla-dēva mentioned in No. 54.

[2] There seems no reason to connect this name, which means Fourteen Nāḍs, with Pāḍināḷknāḍ, a tāluq in Coorg, where it refers to certain Four Nāḍs (Nālknāḍ) in contradistinction to those forming Yeḍenālknāḍ. At the same time it is curious to note that the Terakaṇāmbi-nāḍ is said (Gu 11) to be also called Kuḍugu-nāḍ, which is the name of Coorg.

other five, and gaining possession of Nagarapura (Nanjangūḍ) and Ratnapur (Heḍatale), set up a separate government. After a time they returned to attack Beṭṭadakōṭe, which held out for three years before it was captured, and then only by a stratagem. Mañcha-dannāyak, who conducted the defence, on seeing the citadel taken, leaped from the hill on horseback and was killed, the spot where this occurred being still pointed out. The four victorious Dannāyaks, placing a junior member of the family in charge of the government at Beṭṭadakōṭe, set forth on expeditions of conquest, in the course of which it is said they overran the country from Devasi-beṭṭa (the southern point of Coorg) in the south, to Goa in the north, and from Satyamangalam (on the Bhavāni in Coimbatore District) in the east, to the Bisaleghāṭ (in the north-west of Coorg) on the west. There are no inscriptions in Coorg testifying to these events, which must have soon passed. But the Dannāyaks have left their name in Dannāyakankōṭṭai, 12 miles south-west of Satyamangalam.[1]

Vijayanagar

The Vijayanagar empire had by this time been established, and in 1390 we are informed (Cg 39) that Harihara [II], having read the deed of the original dedication by Rājādhirāja-Koṅgāḷva, with the view of continuing it, made a grant of Muḷḷu-nāḍ to Gonka-Ṛaḍḍi-nāyaka, whose bravery had been noticed by his general Guṇḍappa-daṇṇāyaka. Vijayanagar influence and authority are also attested by the reference made in connection with Bōdha-mahādēva above to Bukka-Rāya; by the acknowledgment of the Bēlūr chiefs below, who owed their status to Kṛishṇa-Rāya; and by the action of the Vijayanagar viceroy in regard to the Chaṅgāḷvas. Firishta says that at the end of the 16th century Coorg proper was governed by its own chiefs, called Nāyaks, who admitted the supremacy of Vijayanagar; but they seem often to have been at feud with one another. According to tradition, the country was then divided into twelve Kombus and thirty-five Nāḍs.

Bēlūr

Of the Bēlūr chiefs there are three inscriptions—Cg 11, dated in 1693; 66 and 47, dated in ? 1755 and 1756. These show that, after the extinction of the Chaṅgāḷvas, the Bēlūr chiefs had acquired some territory for a time in the north of Coorg. The family was descended from Ere-Kṛishṇappa-Nāyaka, the bearer of the Haḍapa, or betel-bag, to the Vijayanagar king Kṛishṇa-Rāya (reigned 1509–29), who gave him the Bēlūr kingdom. It was overrun by Śivappa-Nāyaka of Bednūr before the middle of the 17th century, and by him was bestowed on the fugitive king of Vijayanagar who had fled to him for refuge. He even laid siege to Seringapatam in 1646 on the plea of restoring the Vijayanagar king to power, but was beaten off, and the Mysore army retaliated by subduing the Bēlūr country. On the conclusion of peace in 1694, six nāḍs of Manjarābād were restored to the old chiefs, and the rest divided between the contending parties. The genealogy of the line is given in the Hassan volume of the Epigraphia Carnatica.

Cg 11 records the grant of the village of Kaṭṭepura, with Hirumanahaḷḷi, to a Brāhman, in 1693, by Kṛishṇappa-Nāyaka IV. Cg 66 is the grant of an elephant and the village of Mudravaḷḷi, as an offering for Kṛishṇa, to a great yōgi named Kaivalya, in about 1755, by the Bēlūr king Kṛishṇa (Kṛishṇappa-Nāyaka VI). The inscription is in Sanskṛit verse, and ends with the question: 'If it be asked, for what reason was this given?'—but here the record stops, and furnishes no answer. Cg 47 is of the following year, and states that the same Kṛishṇappa-Nāyaka made a grant of the village-rent to a gauḍa of Mālambi.

Coorg Rājas

On the downfall of the Chaṅgāḷvas in 1644, the throne of Coorg was left vacant. But it did not long remain so. For a prince of the Bednūr family, in the Shimoga District of Mysore, who may have been connected in some way with the Chaṅgāḷvas, established himself at Hālēri (called Kshīra-nagara in Sanskrit), to the north of Mercāra, in the guise of a Jaṅgama or Liṅgāyit priest. Gradually levying contributions by virtue of his sacred office, and enlisting a special guard for his protection, he ended by bringing the whole country under his authority, and was the progenitor of the Coorg Rājas of the house of Hālēri (corrupted into Allory in English documents). The third from him removed the capital from Hālēri to Maḍikēri, the existing Merkāra, or Mercāra as it is now generally spelt, where he built a fort and palace in 1681. His successors continued in power till 1834, when the last was deposed by the British Government, and died in 1859.

The Coorg Rājas claim to be of the Chandra-vaṁśa or Lunar race, of the Bharadvāja-gōtra, Āśvalāyana-sūtra, Ṛikshabhānukādhyāya,[1] and the Vīra-Śaiva mata or religion. The titles they assume are—rājādhirāja, rāja-paramēśvara, prahuḍa-pratāpa, apratima-vīra-narapati, seated on the jewelled throne of the Koḍagu-saṁsthāna. These resemble those of the Mysore Rājas.

Their inscriptions are mostly dated according to the Kali-yuga, though the Śālivāhana-śaka is used in some. But from the time of Linga-Rājēndra I, they have this peculiarity, that not only are the particulars of the date given in the usual manner, but even the precise number of the day of the Kali-yuga. For example, No. 17 informs us that the erection of the Ōṁkārēśvara temple was commenced on the 1,796,392nd Kali day and completed on the 1,797,421st day. This method of dating seems to be a Malabar custom.[2]

No. 12 records the death of Linga-Rājēndra I in 1780, and the erection, in accordance with his wishes, of his tomb in Mahadēvapura, by his son Vīra-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar, who also built there a temple of Basavēśvara and the maṭha or monastery of the Murigi sect, and endowed them with certain villages. The temple was repaired the following year, at the instance of Siddaliṅgappa, deputy guru of Koḍagu, the repairs being completed in 1782. The subservience of the Rājas to the Liṅgāyit gurus will appear in the inscriptions that follow.

No. 13 is the record of a grant to the Abbi-maṭha by Vīra-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar in 1796. In this the king describes himself as having been dedicated by the lotus hands of the svāmi of the Siddapura-maṭha, who was an adherent of those (high priests) enthroned in the upper cave at Śivaganga (in the north-west of the Bangalore District of Mysore). The inscription refers to grants originally made to the Abbi-maṭha in 1728 by his great-grandfather Doḍḍa-Vīrappa-Vaḍeyar, first of two villages, and afterwards of a third, when Doḍḍa-Virūpāksha-svāmi visited Maḍikēri, on which occasion the king held the guru's feet and made petition (that he might offer the grant). These gifts Vīra-Rājēndra now renewed and confirmed, inscribing the details on a copper plate, which was placed at the feet of Nirañjana-dēva of the Abbi-maṭha, representing the Murigi-svāmi. (The chief monastery of the Murigi-svāmi is near Chitaldroog in Mysore). In granting this charter the king directs that at the time of Śiva-pūjā blessings may be continually invoked (for him) with the hymn of benediction (saying).—

Recollection of former births, dominion of the world, the glory of good fortune, surpassing beauty,
Faith in thee, knowledge, long life, (objects of) desire—(of these) be thou giver to me, Śankara, from age to age.

[1] In the latest inscriptions Ṛik-śākhā is substituted for this.

[2] It has also been found in one case, from the North Arcot District, of the Chōḷa king Parāntaka I, in 943 (Rep. Arch. S. of India, 1905–6, p. 171).

The witnesses are thus described:—Sun and moon, wind and fire, sky, earth and water, heart (or conscience) and Yama, day and night, morning and evening; these know the deeds of a righteous man.

No. 14 is a grant of land made at the same time by the same king for the Mahadēvapura-maṭha. When the paṭṭada-svāmi, or crown high-priest, of the Siddapura-maṭha paid a visit to the Mahadēvapura-maṭha, the king performed obeisance to him with the eight members (śāshṭ-āṅga—hands, breast, forehead, knees and feet, touching the ground), and holding his feet, made the gift as an offering to Śiva. The copper plate on which it was inscribed was placed at the feet of Śāntavīra-svāmi, deputy of the Koḍali-mahanta-svāmi, deputy of the Mahā-Murigi-svāmi. The directions as to invocation of blessings at the time of Śiva-pūjā, and the witnesses are as in the preceding inscription.

No. 17 is dated in 1820, and contains an account of the erection of the Ōṁkārēśvara temple at Mercāra and its endowment by Linga-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar II. Considering that by the performance of good deeds in this world must be obtained perfect fruition in the present world and the next, he resolved to set up a Śiva-linga, as an act ensuring the acquisition of the highest merit. Accordingly, he commenced building this beautiful new temple, a lotus ornament to the earth, at the date specified, on the 1,796,392nd Kali day. And in 2 years, 9 months and 25 days the building was completed, and he set up the Śiva-linga named Ōṁkārēśvara in it on the 1,797,421st Kali day, through the power bestowed by the great mercy of the holy Chandraśēkhara (Śiva). Then follows a specification of the allowances granted for up-keep, and the services to be performed, adding that the accounts and papers of the temple were to be audited and examined annually.

No. 25, dated in 1824, is of quite a different character from any of the above, and may perhaps be described as sporting. It relates that when Vīra-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar II, with various laudatory epithets, his fame pervading all the points of the compass, was ruling with justice, purity and uprightness[1], at all times devoted to meditation on Mahādēva;—elephants multiplied so greatly in his country that they were destroying the fruits and crops raised by men for their own sustenance, killing travellers, and doing damage to houses; so much so that the subjects represented that they were unable to bear these calamities. Considering in his mind that it is the duty of a king to put down the evil and uphold the good, he prayed to Gaurīdhava (Śiva) to give him power to remove these troubles. Having received a token of supreme favour from Sāmba-Śankara (Śiva), he had a chariot made, painted like a lion (according to Hindū belief the natural enemy of the elephant), and by means of this entered, beginning on the auspicious 1,798,128th Kali day, into the middle of the forests where the herds of rutting elephants were ranging, and during 2 years, 1 month and 25 days (March 1822 to April 1824), to the 1,798,913th Kali day, by the power of his arm having destroyed them in various ways, made a pause, while at the same time others had by his orders been captured alive with chains by trained soldiers. He thus made good the pronunciation of gaja (elephant) in the popular form aja (goat).

An account is then given in detail of the numbers killed and captured, the places where they were bagged, and the dates on which the hunts took place. The forests visited were those in the east and south of the country—in Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa tāluq, Uluguli-Mūḍigēri-nāḍ and Horūr-Nūrokkal-nāḍ (both in Mercāra tāluq), Koḍagu-Śrīrangapaṭṭaṇa, and Kiggaṭnāḍ tāluq. The actual number of days occupied in the hunt was 38, during which the Rāja killed with his own hand 233, and his troops captured alive 181. A total of 414 elephants was thus accounted for.

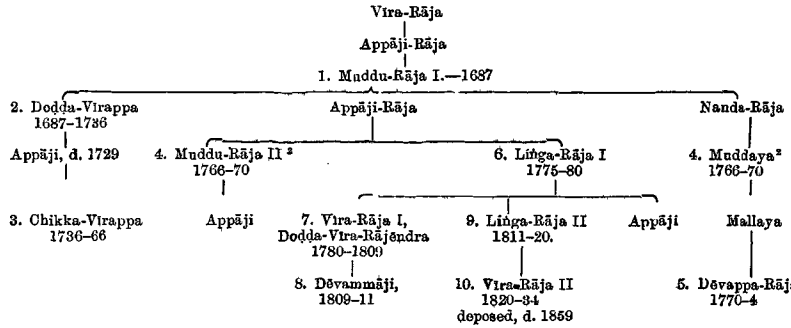
Great was the astonishment at the success of the operations, which is expressed in verse as follows :—Though herds of elephants, towering like mountains, hid the sun as when the sky is overcast with storm-clouds, and roamed about trumpeting in the forests,—with seven-tongued weapons (fire-arms) like thunderbolts he slew them in a moment, while his men captured alive huge and lofty rutting elephants as if they were mice. What a marvel indeed was this!

Such are the inscriptions of the Coorg Rājas, and they give a very inadequate account of their history. It may be well therefore to supplement the information by a table of the Rājas and a summary of the main points connected with their reigns, as well as a notice of the circumstances under which the line came to an end [1]. The following is the pedigree :—



Muddu-Rāja I, as already stated above, made Mercāra the capital in 1681. In 1690, when Mysore and Bednūr were contending for the Bēlūr and Manjarābād territory, Doḍḍa-Vīrappa took possession of the Yēḷusāvira country. He also gained the district of Amara-Sulya by aiding the Chirakkal-Rāja against Bednūr. His brothers Appāji-Rāja and Nanda-Rāja settled at Hālēri and Horamale respectively. He died in 1736, at the age of 78. His only son had died in 1729, after being imprisoned for twelve years. But Chikka-Vīrappa, the son of the latter, who had been imprisoned with him, succeeded to the throne. During his reign Haidar Ali rose to power in Mysore, who, on his conquest of Bednūr in 1763, laid claim to Yēḷusāvira, but in consideration of a payment of three lakhs of pagodas consented to grant Uchingi to Coorg. Chikka-Vīrappa died in 1766 without leaving any heir. The succession therefore passed to the Hālēri and Horamale branches.

Muddu-Rāja II and Muddaya, representing the two houses, ruled together at the same time. The promised cession of Uchingi having been delayed, eventually they succeeded in obtaining Panje and Bellāre instead. These joint rulers both died in the same year, 1770. A dispute for the throne now arose between Muddu-Rāja's son Appāji, supported by his uncle Linga-Rāja, and Muddaya's grandson Dēvappa, supported by his father Mallaya. Dēvappa was preferred and became Rāja, on which Linga-Rāja went off to seek the assistance of Haidar Ali, taking with him his son Vīra-Rāja and his nephew Appāji. As soon as a respite in the war which Haidar was waging with the Mahrattas allowed, he furnished Linga-Rāja with a force which enabled him to march upon Coorg. Dēvappa-Rāja fled to the Chirakkal-Rāja, but meeting with a cold reception, escaped to Harihar, where he was taken prisoner and sent to Seringapatam. There he was put to death, with all his family, the Horamale branch being thus brought to an end. Haidar now offered Coorg to Linga-Rāja on condition of paying tribute, but deprived him of Amara-Sulya, Panje, Bellāre, and Yēḷusāvira, giving him instead permission to occupy a part of Wainād. On Linga-Rāja's death in 1780, Haidar assumed entire possession of Coorg under the pretext of being guardian to his sons until they should come of age. Meanwhile they were made to reside at Gorūr, on the Kāvērī, in the Hassan District of Mysore. A former Brāhman treasurer of the Coorg Rāja was appointed governor, and a Musalmān garrison held the fort at Mercāra.

These measures drove the Coorgs into rebellion, and in 1782 they rose and expelled the Musalmāns. Haidar was at this time engaged in war with the British in the Carnatic, and his death soon after prevented immediate retribution. But his son Ṭīpu Sultān was fully determined on the reconquest of Coorg. He removed the family of the Coorg Rājas to Piriyapaṭṇa or Periapatam, and when he had retaken Nagar, and reduced Mangalore in 1784, marched through Coorg to Seringapatam. After denouncing the Coorgs as guilty of polyandry, and for their rebellions, he said he would forgive them this once, but if they rebelled again he vowed that he would honour every man with Islām and banish them from their country. Scarcely had he left when they again took up arms in 1785 and repossessed themselves of their native hills. A force sent to put them down was driven back, on which Ṭīpu himself marched to Coorg with an army. Having allured most of the Coorgs to meet him at Tale-Kāvērī, under pretence of peaceable intentions and conciliatory measures, he suddenly seized them, and hunting out their families, drove them, altogether about 70,000, like a herd of cattle to Seringapatam, where all the males were forcibly circumcised. Coorg was partitioned among Musalmān landlords, to whom the slaves of the country were made over. The only condition laid on the new owners was that they were to search out and slay all such Coorgs as might have escaped his vengeance, as he was resolved on their extermination. The country was held in four forts, at Mercāra (Jāfarābād), Fraserpet (Kushālnagar), Bhāgamaṇḍala, and Beppunād.

But in December 1788 Vīra-Rāja or Vīra-Rājēndra-Wodeyar, with his wife and his two brothers Linga-Rāja and Appāji, managed to escape from Piriyapaṭṇa, after a confinement of six years. The Coorgs rallied round him, and before long he had possessed himself of the whole country, the large force sent against him by Ṭīpu being diverted to the western coast owing to a revolt of the Malayāḷam Rājas. The British now entered into a treaty with Vīra-Rājēndra in view to the impending struggle with Ṭīpu. He assisted the Bombay army on its march to Seringapatam with supplies procured by wholesale plunder of the neighbouring countries; and at the spot where he first met the British Commander, General Abercromby, he founded Vīrarājēndrapet (generally called Vīrājpet for short), now the second place in Coorg.

On the night in February 1792 when Lord Cornwallis drove Ṭīpu back into Seringapatam and the British occupied the island, 5,000 Coorgs who had been carried away by Ṭīpu escaped in the confusion and regained their native country, making with their wives and children a body of some 12,000. In the final war with Ṭīpu in 1799, Vīra-Rājēndra again rendered assistance with supplies and transport, and laid waste the enemy's country around Coorg. He was rewarded with some of the trophies of the victory, and was granted Panje and Bellāre in South Kanara.

His great anxiety now arose from his having no son to succeed him. He had married a second time in 1796, but only daughters were born to him. His mind was affected, and he became subject to paroxysms of sanguinary rage in which he ordered executions and massacres for which he was filled with remorse when he recovered. A plot to assassinate him failed. With the death of his wife in 1807 all hopes of an heir being extinguished, he wrote to the Governor-General requesting that the succession to the throne might be settled on his four daughters or their male issue in order of seniority. Before this matter could be decided, he felt that his end was approaching, and maddened with concern for the safety of his daughters if he should die, he sent executioners to put his two brothers to death, but coming to himself again, despatched messengers to countermand the orders. They were too late in the case of Appāji, the younger one, but were in time to save Linga-Rāja. He also had a history of the Coorg Rājas, called the Rājēndranāme[1], compiled in Kannaḍa or Kanarese, which was translated for him into English by Lieutenant Abercromby at Mangalore in 1808. At length, in June 1809, he sent for his beloved daughter Dēvammāji, gave his seal into her hands, and shortly after expired.

Dēvammāji, though under age, was now acknowledged as Rāni of Coorg, and the Sōde Rāja, who was married to the late Rāja's daughter by his first wife, continued to act as Dewan. But Linga-Rāja induced the Coorgs to accept him as Regent instead of the Sōde Rāja, who retired to his own country. Linga-Rāja next persuaded the Rāni to sign an abdication of the throne in his favour, and in 1811 permanently assumed the government. He also strove to get possession of the large sums invested at Bombay and Madras in the name of Dēvammāji by her father. But these the Governor-General pronounced to be state funds, only the interest of which might be paid to Linga-Rāja as guardian of Dēvammāji and Regent of Coorg. Linga-Rāja strengthened all the fortifications, and carried out a regular survey of the land; but reduced the people to a state of abject slavery by a rigid system of terror, of which no hint was allowed to be heard outside the country[2]. He died in 1820, at the age of 45, and his wife, full of fear for her future, committed suicide and was buried with him.

His son, Vīra-Rāja II, who was about 20 years old, succeeded. His first act was to put to death all who had displeased or thwarted him in his father's lifetime. He was grossly sensual and most sanguinary in his rule, bloody executions continually taking place. At length, in 1832, his sister and her husband escaped to Mysore and put themselves under the protection of the British Resident. Their restoration was refused, and inquiries were made into the proceedings of the Rāja, who was warned of the consequences if he did not reform. But he paid no heed. Dēvammāji, the daughter of Vīra-Rājēndra, was murdered, as well as all the surviving members of the families of his predecessors. As his disaffection openly increased, and he wrote insulting letters to the Governor of Madras and the Governor-General, it was decided in 1834 to depose him. This resolution was met by a most abusive proclamation against the British. A force advanced into Coorg in four columns from different sides, and encountered but little serious opposition at most of the stockades. The British flag was hoisted at Mercāra on the 6th of April. The Rāja, who had retired to Nālknāḍ with his women and treasures, had not the courage to face the invaders.

[1] Not altogether to be relied on. It relates to the period from 1633 to 1807.

[2] Interesting light is thrown on the system of administration by the translation of the Hukumnāma, or Regulations for Public Servants, issued in the name of this king, which has recently been published (Mercara, 1911), with an Introduction, by Mr. A. J. Curgenven, I.C.S.—Some graphic accounts of his visit to Coorg in 1811 and 1812 are given by Colonel James Welsh in his Reminiscences from a Journal of Forty Years Active Service in the East Indies.

On the 11th, Colonel Fraser, the Political Agent with the force, issued a proclamation that "the rule and dominion of Rāja Vīra-Rājēndra-Wodeyar over the country of Coorg had now definitely and for ever ceased." The Coorgs breathed freely when they found that he was not to remain in their country, and unanimously voted to be placed under the British Government. The annexation was accordingly proclaimed on the 7th of May 1834. The ex-Rāja was deported to Vellore, and was subsequently allowed to live at Benares. In addition to the pension granted to him, he demanded the payment to him of the capital, originally the inheritance of Dēvammāji, of which the interest had continued to be paid to the Coorg Rājas. In 1852 he obtained permission from the Governor-General, Lord Dalhousie, to visit England with his favourite daughter Gauramma, then ten years old, in order to give her a European education. Arrived there, he expressed a wish to have her brought up in the Christian faith. Queen Victoria took an interest in the Indian princess, and at her baptism, on the 30th of June 1852, stood sponsor through the Archbishop of Canterbury, and gave her the name Victoria Gauramma. Feeling himself now strong in the royal favour, the ex-Rāja commenced a Chancery suit against the East India Company for the recovery of the sums formerly invested for Dēvammāji. The suit dragged on a weary course till in 1858 the Government of India was transferred to the Crown, and his suit thus failed. The Coorg princess was carefully brought up[1] and eventually married a British officer, but she died in 1864, leaving one child, a girl. Her husband afterwards mysteriously disappeared and is supposed to have fallen a victim to foul play. Vīra-Rāja himself died in London on the 24th of September 1859. His body was at first temporarily placed in the catacombs at Kensal Green cemetery, and next year sent to India for interment, two of his wives going with it to Benares.

British Period

Of three inscriptions falling in this period, only one (Cg 29) need be noticed. It is dated in 1857 and records the restoration of the temple of Mahādēva on the Kunda hill in Beṭṭiyattu-nāḍ. The work was commenced three years before, on the 1,810,060th Kali day, by agreement between the Takka-mukhyastaru of Beṭṭiyattu-nāḍ and Ammati-nāḍ. These Takkas are recognized elders among the Coorgs in each village and nāḍ, and are the censors of morals and regulators of social affairs. The institution is hereditary in certain families. The inscription gives a list of the principal people who assisted in the work, and mentions what parts of the temple they provided. One was actually a Muhammadan by name, the Jāgīrdār of the Kunda village, and he had the Nandīśvara or sacred bull in front of the temple made. A blessing is invoked on all who took part in the erection.

Architecture

The ruined Jain temples at Muḷḷūr may have been worthy of notice. But the principal architectural monuments now standing are the tombs of the Rājas at Mahadēvapura, near Mercāra, built in 1809 and 1821. They are square buildings, much in the Muhammadan style, on well raised basements, with a handsome dome in the centre, and minaret-like turrets at the four corners surmounted by ḥasavas or bulls. On the top of the dome is a gilded ball, with a vane. All the windows have well carved syenite frames, with solid brass bars. The palace at Mercāra, first erected in 1681, is also of interest, though alterations have been made to fit it for its present uses. Good wood-carving may sometimes be seen in the domestic architecture.

1 Originally deciphered by me and published in 1872, Ind. Ant. i, 363; see also xii, 12. The facsimile now published is from an impression by Dr. Fleet. The original impression by Dr. Burgess is given in the Indian Antiquary, vol. i.

2 A symbol here supposed to represent Ōm.

3 The nna is inserted below the line.

4 Vidyā is inserted below the line, with a small cross above, to show where it should come.

5 By mistake tna has been engraved for tma.

6 This name should most probably be Abhayaṇandi.

7 The second ṇa is inserted below the line.

8 The first sa is inserted below the line between two vertical strokes.

9 The ya is inserted below the line.

[1] The ta is inserted below the line between two vertical strokes.

[2] What looks like this name is inserted below the line here in a different cursive hand.

[3] The ya is inserted below the line.

[4] Generally Sagarādibhiḥ.

[5] Properly sētum: the collocation dharmma hētum recalls the Buddhist formula.

[6] Generally bhāvina.

[7] Generally Rāmachandraḥ.

[8] See note 2, p. 30.

[9] The first ne is inserted below the line.

[10] For the subscript va the earlier form of ba is used; also in l. 8, 9.

[11] The sign for subscript ṇa is the same as for na, as usual at this period.

[12] Read aynūrvvarum. The subscript va in this and the next line has the modern form of ba.

[13] Read likhitam.

[14] This name begins with the old form of ba here, but with the new form in l. 8.

Be it well. Success through the adorable Padmanābha, resembling (in colour) the cloudless sky.

A sun illumining the clear firmament of the Jāhnavī (or Ganga) kula, possessed of strength and valour from the great pillar of stone dividing with a single stroke of his sword, adorned with the ornament of a wound received in cutting down the hosts of his cruel enemies, of the Kaṇvāyana gōtra, was śrīmān Koṅgaṇi-mahādhirāja.

His son, inheriting the qualities of his father, possessing a character for learning and modesty, having obtained the honours of the kingdom only for the sake of the good government of his subjects, a touchstone for (testing) gold the learned and poets, skilled among those who expound and practise the science of politics, author of a commentary on the Dattaka-sūtra[1], was śrīmān Mādhava-mahādhirāja.

His son, uniting the qualities of his father and grandfather, having entered into war with many elephants (so that) his fame had tasted the waters of the four oceans, was śrīmad Harivarmma-mahādhirāja.

His son, devoted to the worship of the twice-born, gurus, and gods, not leaving the feet of Nārāyaṇa, was śrīmad Vishṇugōpa-mahādhirāja.

His son, whose head was purified by the pollen from the lotuses the feet of Triyambhaka, having by personal strength and valour purchased his kingdom, daily eager to extricate the ox of merit from the thick mire of the Kali-yuga in which it had sunk, was śrīmān Mādhava-mahādhirāja.

His son, the beloved sister's son of Kṛishṇavarmma-mahādhirāja,—who was the sun in the firmament of the Kadamba-kula,—his mind illumined with the increase of learning and modesty, of indomitable bravery, reckoned the first among the learned, was śrīmān Koṅgaṇi-mahādhirāja, named Avinīta.

Of whose gift to Chandaṇandi-bhaṭāra, the disciple of Guṇaṇaṇdi-bhāṭāra, who was the disciple of Jayaṇandi-bhaṭāra, who was the disciple of Sīḷabhadra-bhaṭāra, who was the disciple of Abha[ya]nandi-bhaṭāra, who was the disciple of Guṇachandra-bhaṭāra, of the Dēsiga-gaṇa and Koṇḍakundānvaya, in the year eighty-eight beyond three hundred, the month Māgha, Monday, the Svati-nakshatra, the fifth day of the bright fortnight,—the minster (mantri) of Akālavarsha-Pṛithuvī-Vallabha—having obtained (it) by grant from Avinīta-mahādhirāja—presented the charming (village) named Baḍaṇeguppe, (situated) within the Eḍenāḍu Seventy of the Pūnāḍu Six Thousand, to the Śrīvijaya Jina temple of Taḷavana-nagara, together with twelve kaṇḍuga in each of the six dependent hamlets, the ambali-maṇṇu, the tala-vitti in Taḷavana-pura, twelve kaṇḍuga in Pogaṛigeḷe, and twelve kaṇḍuga according to the accepted royal measure in Piṛikeṛe.

[1] Dattaka was an early poet, of perhaps the 1st century, who, induced by the dancing girls of Pāṭalīputra, wrote a work on one section of the Kāma-sūtra (See JRAS. 1911, p. 183). In Kannaḍa his name appears as Jattaka. Thus the Hoysaḷa prince Eṛeyanga is styled in an inscription (Ak 102a) abaḷā-Jattakan, or a Jattaka to the weaker sex.

Whoso takes away land presented by himself or by another is born a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years. The earth has been enjoyed by many kings and Saka kings[2] ; whosesoever at any time is the land, his at that time is the fruit. The property of the gods is a dreadful poison ; call not poison poison, poison kills a single person, but a gift to the gods (if seized) destroys sons and grandsons. Merit is a common bridge for kings, this do ye support from age to age, O kings,—thus does Rāmabhadra beseech the kings who come after him.

Visvakarmma's writing.

Prosperity to the Jina-śāsana.

Of the years expired since the time of the Saka king, the eight hundred and ninth year being current,—

Be it well. Satyavākya-Konguṇivarmma-dharmma-maḥārājādhirāja, boon lord of Kovaḷāla-pura, lord of Nandagiri, in the eighteenth year of śrīmat-Permmanaḍi's anointing to the kingdom, on the auspicious fifth day of the month Phāḷguṇa, to Śivaṇandi-siddhānta-bhaṭāra's disciple Sarvvaṇandi-dēva, for the Satyavākya Jina temple of the Penne kaḍanga, Permmanaḍi gave the twelve hamlets of Biḷiūr in Peddoṛegare, free of entry from all feet.[3]

They of the Ninety-six Thousand, the five tributary chiefs, the seventy of Beddoṛegare, and the eight householders are witnesses to this.

[1] Badaṇeguppe still exists under the same name, and is in the north of the Chāmrājnagar tāluq of Mysore. Of the other villages mentioned in the boundaries and witnesses,—Dāsanūr is in Nanjangūḍ tāluq, Poḷma, now called Homma (see Ch 63) and Ummatūr are in Chāmrājnagar tāluq, Tagaḍūr is in Nanjagūḍ tāluq, Ganiganūr in Yelandūr, and Nandyāla is named in Yl 27.

[2] Generally the phrase is 'Sagara and others.'

[3] Or, perhaps, 'free of all imposts.'

They of the Male Thousand, the Five Hundred, and the five ? garland-makers are guardians of this.

Whoso destroys this destroys Bāraṇāsi, a thousand Brāhmans and a thousand tawny cows, and is guilty of the five great sins.

Sedōja's writing.

Biḷiūr will bring eighty gadyāṇas of gold and eight hundred (measures) of paddy.

Be it well. Of the hundreds of years expired since the time of the Saka king, the 899th, the year Īsvara being current :—

Be it well. Satyavākya-Kongiṇivarmma-dharmma-mahārājādhirāja, boon lord of Kōḷāḷa-pura, lord of Nandagiri, śrīmat-Rāchamalla-Permmanaḍi, within that year, on the Nandīśvara talpa day of the bright fortnight of Phālguṇa,—

Be it well. When the valiant one adorned with a powerful right arm—the abode of his sword—vigorous in seizing the priceless pearls scattered from the frontal globes of the troops of proud elephants of all his enemies, his elder brother's warrior, a friend of the poor, śrīmat-Rakkasa was ruling Beddoṛegare ;—

Prosperity to the Jina-śāsana. A resident of śrī-Beḷgoḷa, śrīmat-Anantavīryyayya, the beloved disciple of śrī-Goṇasēna-paṇḍita-bhaṭṭāraka, who was the beloved disciple of śrī-Bīrasēna-siddhānta-dēva, acquired Peggadūr and the new trench, secure against obstruction.

Witnesses to it :—They of the Ninety-six Thousand, the five tributary chiefs, the Peddoṛegare seventy, and the eight householders.

Guardians of this :—The four Malepar (or hill chiefs), the Five Hundred, and the five ? garland-makers.

Whoso destroys Śrīpurusha[1]-mahārāja's gift destroys Bāṇarāsi, a thousand Brāhmans and a thousand tawny cows, and is guilty of the five great sins. Whoso protects this acquires great merit.

Chandaṇandiyayya's writing. Grant of the Perggadūr basadi.

[1] So apparently in the latest impression ; but in those given in my first edition and in Ind. Ant. vi, 102, it was clearly Śrīpurada. It is doubtful if Śrīpurusha would have been read unless for this name being now familiar. It looks more like Śrīṛ-parama-māhārāja.

Be it well. Fortune.—Doing obeisance to Vināyaka the all-learned guru, and to the goddess Sarasvatī,—so far as I am able an auspicious śāsana will I make [1].

Be it well. Fortune.—The disciple of Avidyāmṛityu-bhaṭṭāraka of the auspicious Purushōttama-parshad, Bōdharūpa-Bhagavar, had this stone śāsana made for (the god) Mahādēva of Pālayūr. That whoso among the Śrīvaishṇavas of the Eighteen countries, the Vaḷañjiyar (merchants) of the Eighteen countries, the arm-bearing Thousands of the Eighteen countries, or the Brāhmaṇas of the Eighteen nāḍus, seeing it, will dutifully maintain it, is this stone śāsana set up.

Whoso does not pay as laid down by the amachchān after examination of the temple and the requirements of the worship, incurs the penalty of the man who murders his own father, or takes to wife his own mother, or murders the king of the very nāḍu in which he was born, or cuts off the nose of him who having bound on the right side seizes on the left, or marries a woman within the prohibited degrees of relationship.

The Valañjiyar of the Eighteen countries and others . . . will have the daily expenses and other provisions noted in the treasury accounts of the temple read out once a year, and see that each item mentioned therein which has been omitted to be carried out is properly conducted as directed.

Be it well. Fortune.—Doing obeisance to the guru by devotion,—Bṛihaspati (Jupiter) being in conjunction with Kanyā (Virgo), in the great month named Vṛiśchika (Scorpio), on the day following Bṛihaspati's (that is on Friday),—a universal sāsana, a sāsana for the guru, who is a form of joy, will I, Bōdharūpa, make even at the holy Bhagaṇḍāśrama also.

When Mēlpuṇḍi-Kunniyarasa was ruling the nāḍu,—Bōdharūpa-Bhagavar-arasu of the auspicious Purushōttama-parshad, with others, had a copper plate engraved. Whoever stops for a day the daily expenses laid down in the plate, whether male or female, including Kunniyarasa (himself), violates the order of the king ruling this nāḍu. The penalty for such violation for one day is 12 kāṇam and twice the offerings for the god; and when continued for a whole week, 12 kaḻiñju of gold of 7 touches to the king.

There will be 17 perpetual lamps. The quantity of rice to be supplied by the poduvāḷ for daily offerings, etc., is 26 nāḻi. For the high oblation there will be 2 nāḻi, and for flowers 4 nāḻi. There will also be supplied daily 32 garlands of flowers and 6 lamps in the month of Vṛiśchika.

Whoso does not pay as laid down by the amachchān after examination of the temple and the requirements of the worship, shall be looked upon as a traitor conspiring to murder the king of the very nāḍu in which he was born, and incurs the penalty of the man who cuts off the nose of him who having bound on the right side seizes on the left, and of one who takes to wife a woman within the prohibited degrees of relationship. Should the king be indifferent towards a man who does not pay the above fine, even after seeing and hearing him, the people of his nāḍu will curse him. . . . . .

The people have to perform five items of service, of which the Mahābhārata is one. If even a single item of the expenses is stopped, the penalty shall be 2½ kāṇam for every day.

May the arm-bearing Thousands of the Eighteen countries and the Valañjiyar protect the Vaganḍa temple. May the ascetics and the king ? prosper.

Obeisance to śrī-Sāntinātha. Be it free from obstruction. Be it fortunate.

May it prevail, the auspicious supreme profound syād-vāda, a fruit-bearing token, the doctrine of the lord of the three worlds, the Jina doctrine.

Be it well. Of the śrī-Mūla-sangha, Dēśi-gaṇa, Pustaka-gachchha, Kuṇḍakund-ānvaya, and Ingulēśvara circle, a bee intoxicated from the lotus feet of Gummaṭa-Jin ēśvara, the lord of the auspicious Beḷugula-pura, promoter of the religious merit of the time, (was) Dharmāchārya, whose titles were as follows :—nourishing the groups of lotuses the learned, he at the same time drove away the darkness from the minds of evil-speakers proud as the tortoise that bears up the earth, upholding the character of a Digambara shining ornament, he ever protected the ruddy goose the Bhavyas (or Jains),—thus was the sun Pandita-dēva ever distinguished with the rays his gentle speech.

Be it well. The auspicious Āchārya of the circle of the royal rājagurus, the great lord of powerful orators, a Brahmā of royal speakers, emperor of all the learned, preserver of the life of Ballāla-Rāya,—distinguished with these and many other titles, was śrīmach-Chāru kīrtti-Paṇḍita-dēva; the disciple of whose disciple's disciple was śrīmad-Abhinava-Chāru kīrtti-Paṇḍita-dēva; whose beloved disciple, his elder brother's disciple, śrīmach-Chāru kīrtti-Paṇḍita-dēva's fellow-student, śrīmach-Chhāntikīrtti-dēva[1], in the Śaka year 1466 expired, the year Krōdhi being current, on the 15th of the bright fortnight of Kārtika, caused to be written a stone inscription as follows :—

His guru śrīmad-Abhinava-Chārukīrtti-Paṇḍita-dēva,—when, for the promotion of religious merit in the Kali age, Śanti-tīrthēśvara and Anantanātha-svāmi themselves came and manifested themselves from the Suvarṇāvatī river in the Śaka year 1453, the year Vikṛitu, in Chaitra,—having paid a visit to the basadi of Śāntināṭha-svāmi who dwells on the summit of Anjanagiri, and made on the crest of the hill a basadi of wood—in the year Khara, in the month Chaitra, he caused it to be consecrated by the hand of his own younger brother Konasanaguḍḍa Śāntōpādhyāya, and left instructions for the erection of a stone basadi.

After that, in the following year Krōdhi, the 15th of the bright fortnight of Kārtika, the stone work done to the foundation and the hāladhāres were as follows :—to all the halaru of Bemmatti Būtanhāḷḷi and Maganakeṛe belonging to Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa, paid for stone work ga 200 honnu ; to Ādi-Śrī-Avvagaḷ of Hanasoge[2] for having the stone work of the inner shrine done by Bhujabali-Śrī-Avvagaḷ of Ammana-Hosahaḷḷi, paid ga 30 honnu ; to his guru śrīmach-Chārukīrtti-Paṇḍita-dēva for two sets of three hāladhāre, and for a curtain for the centre door at the one time of the offering, paid ga 50 ; and for a curtain at the distribution of food ga ? 50

In the year Śubhakṛitu, the 15th of the bright fortnight of Phālguna, all the halaru, the Kannaḍiga halaru and Nānādēśi halaru of Bidire and Sītāḷamaḷige for (the god) Śāntīś vara of Anjanagiri made a dharma and had it written in their dharma śāsana, saying the 81 paṇa due for the footpath that we have built, we will give for distribution of food. Whoso fail in this dharma are guilty of murdering cows and Brāhmans.

In the Śaka year 1465, the year Śubhakṛitu, the 13th of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, Wednesday, the Vṛishabha-lagna, the family consecration was performed of the three sets of dēhāragaḷu[3]. For a dānaśāle the price of the Haḷḷivayalu paddy field, 70 ga, and the sum given to the kōlāyaru for work at the new paddy field, 50 ga, both together an outlay of 120 ga, was received from śrimach-Chārukīrtti-Paṇḍita-deva's disciples Ādi-Śrī-Avvagaḷ of Hanasoge and Bhujabali-Śrī-Avvagaḷ, 24 ga; Basavapaṭṇa Anantamati-Avagal paid through Nēmi-Śrī-Avvagaḷ 24 ga ; Muddi-seṭṭi's Vijayi paid through Śrī-Avvagaḷ 10 ga ; through Muluganahaḷḷi Ādyakka was paid 12 ga ; from Haruva-seṭṭi and Vijeyaṇa-seṭṭi, 30 ga ; from Kaṇṇanūr Dēvaramma-seṭṭi, 12 ga ; . . . . . .

The just witnesses to this :—Sun and moon, wind and fire, sky, earth and water, heart and mind, day and night, morning and evening,—these know the deeds of a righteous man.

Of giving or protecting a gift, than giving, protecting a gift is better ; by giving, svarga is obtained ; by protecting a gift, the eternal state. Than giving oneself, to protect another's gift is twice as meritorious ; by taking away another's gift one's own gift becomes fruitless. Land given by oneself is a daughter, that given by one's father is a sister, that given by another is a mother ; therefore land given must not be abandoned. An only sister to all kings in the world, neither to be enjoyed nor taken in marriage, is land given to a Brāhman.

At this time of his becoming subject to Śiva, the moon to the waters of the womb of that Mahārāja (i.e. his son), Vīra-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar, being in his presence, performed the funeral rites,—and, according to his orders, had his tomb made in Mahādēvapura, had a temple built and the god Basavēśvara consecrated above the tomb, and had a maṭha of the Murige sect erected. And, to provide for the worship at all times of the gaṇas and of this god, assigned this Mahādēvapura land, in the year Nala, on the 1st of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, Friday, setting up (boundary) stones, stamped with the linga, to the villages of Chikka-Harade, Jambūru, Bēlūru, and Basavanahaḷḷi,—and caused a deed of the gift to be written and given.

The repairs were begun in the year Śārvari, on the 13th day of the bright fortnight of Kārtika, and completed in the year Śubhakṛitu, on the 10th of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha, Monday.

Whereas the two villages which formerly, in the year 1650 of the Śālivāhana era, the year Kīlaka, on the 2nd day of the bright fortnight of Kārttika, Wednesday (23 October 1728), our senior grand-uncle (grandfather's elder brother) Doḍḍa-Vīrappa-Vaḍeyar,—in addition to the two villages Hosaḷḷi and Jigaṭṭaḷḷi which had formerly come to the Abbi-maṭha of Yaḍava-nād,—when Doḍḍa-Virūpāksha-svāmi paid a visit to Maḍikēri, holding his feet and making petition, in order to obtain merit as long as sun and moon endure, newly presented to the Abbi-maṭha the Bāchaḷḷi village, having a ground rent of 16 varaha; and these three villages, Hosaḷḷi, Jigaṭṭaḷḷi and Bāchaḷḷi, had been made over to the Abbi maṭha, with the erection of (boundary) stones stamped with the linga, in the presence of the people of the four (boundary) villages.

On this 1st day of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, Friday,—in order that our father and all ancestors may attain to the eternal Śiva-lōka,—we have written a renewed gift of the land on a copper plate and presented it.

And within the four boundaries of these three villages, Hosaḷḷi, Jigaṭṭaḷḷi, and Bāchaḷḷi, which belong to the Abbi maṭha, the eight rights of full possession, namely, hidden treasure, underground stores, springs, timber, minerals, present profit, future profit, actualities and possibilities, etcetera,—the whole of that land, as an offering to Śiva, in order that, performing the worship of the gaṇas and continuing the work of merit as long as sun and moon endure, at the time of Śiva-pūjā blessings may be continually invoked with the hymn of benediction (saying)—

Recollection of former births, dominion of the world, the glory of good fortune, surpassing beauty,
Faith in thee, knowledge, long life, (objects of) desire,—(of these) be thou giver to me, Śankara, from age to age—have we written and given this renewed gift of land.

Witnesses thereto :—Sun and moon, wind and fire, sky, earth and water, heart (or conscience) and Yama, day and night, and the two twilights ; these know the deeds of a righteous man.

Than making a gift oneself, to protect another's gift is twice as meritorious : by taking away another's gift one's own gift becomes fruitless.

When the svāmi visited this Mahādēvapura maṭha, performing obeisance to him with the eight members and holding his feet, in order to obtain merit as long as sun and moon endure, he wrote and made over uttār land as follows :—as an offering for Śiva, to the maṭha 700 bhaṭṭis of paddy, the produce of this land having a bijavari of 17 bhaṭṭis ; and to the maṭha for extra expenses, the ground rent of the villages marked out by the erection of stones with the stamp of the linga and presented, as follows :—from Chikka Harade and Jambūru villages, whose bijavari of 43 bhaṭṭis has a ground rent of 39 varaha, deducting the former grants for pura-varga, dēva-mānya, and bhūta-uttāra, altogether 6½ varaha for bijavari of 6½ bhaṭṭis, the ground rent of the remaining free land, 36½ varaha for bijavari of 36½ bhaṭṭis ; from Bēlūru, belonging to Thenka-nāḍ-mande in Yaḍava-nāḍ, with Gudugūru in Basavanahaḷḷi, the two villages having a ground rent of 50 varaha for bijavari of 50 bhaṭṭis, deducting the former grants for pura-varga, dēva-mānya, bhūta-uttāra, and nāyi-maṇṇu, altogether a ground rent of $17\frac{1}{2}$ varaha for $17\frac{1}{2}$ bhaṭṭis, the ground rent of the remaining free land, $32\frac{1}{2}$ varaha for a bijavari of $32\frac{1}{2}$ bhaṭṭis. Total, from the 4 villages, after deducting the former grants, ground rent of free land coming to the maṭha,—69 varaha, and 700 bhaṭṭis of produce.

Having presented this in this tithi, with the erection of stones stamped with the linga, in the presence of the people of the four villages,—with the desire that father and all other ancestors may attain to the eternal Śiva-lōka, there are given, within the four boundaries of these villages marked out by the erection of stones stamped with the linga, the eight rights of full possession, namely, hidden treasure, underground stores, springs, timber, minerals, present profit, future profit, actualities and possibilities, etcetera; and the whole of that land, as an offering to Śiva, in order that performing the worship of the gaṇas, at the time of Śiva-pūjā may be recited the hymn of blessing (saying)—

In the year 1739 of the victorious increasing Śālivāhana era, the year Īśvara, on the 2nd of the dark fortnight of Jēshṭha, Sunday, (1st June 1817), the 1,796,392nd Kali day,—on this auspicious day,—like a pārijāta to the milk ocean the Chandra-vaṁśa, born in the Bhāradvāja-gōtra, of the Āśvalāyana-sūtra and Rik-śākha, proficient in supporting the Vīra-Śaiva religion, seated on the illustrious jewelled and beautiful throne in the ancient Kshīra-nagara[1] in the auspicious Koḍagu-samsthāna, a sun in unequalled valour and glory, of uninterrupted splendour, of a fame which illuminated all the points of the compass, a Yudhishṭhira in upholding all manner of royal virtues,—the mahārāja-Appāji-Rājēndra's grandson, Linga-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar's son, śrī-Linga-Rājēndra-Vaḍeyar, reflecting that by the performance in this world of good deeds must be obtained the perfection of fruit in both this world and the next, and that with that object he should cause to be set up a Śiva-linga as an act ensuring the acquisition of the highest merit, so resolved in his mind,—And on that day, in an auspicious moment, having commenced the erection of a beautiful new Ōṁkārēśvara temple, a lotus ornament to the earth, which with its skilfully designed maṇṭapas, etcetera, might be called a royal lotus,—from that time to the year Vikrama, the 12th of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, Sunday, (26th March 1820), or 2 years 9 months and 25 days,—on that auspicious 1,797.421st Kali day,—having completed all the preparations for this great wonder, he caused to be set up the fortune-bestowing Śiva-linga named Ōṁkārēśvara, and satisfied his desires;—that is to say, through the power bestowed by the great mercy of the holy Chan draśēkhara, the said divine purpose fulfilling every wish of the mind, the setting up of the Śiva-linga was perfectly accomplished.

Whoso with devotion praise the holy Mahēśvara, to them at all times whatever merit may be obtained will itself become perpetual: which, that it may be known to all people, has this śāsana been written. Be it prosperous.

Yearly, for the gods Ōṁkārēśvara, Kumārēśvara, and śrī-Nandīśvara, to be continued in perpetuity as long as sun and moon endure, for the daily service, for the offering of food, for the perpetual lamp, for the general service, for the five lunar observances, and for the salaried servants, are granted 1,221 one thousand two hundred and twenty-one Kaṇṭhirāyi varaha; which money, with remission on grain, cloths and other articles, to be granted every year from the palace-divān's office treasury for the support of religion, being appointed to be spent on the services,—it is directed that at the three seasons divine worship be carried on according to the śāstras without intermission, that a daily inquiry be held, and that the accounts and papers of this temple be examined annually.

Such is the decree for the allowance. By order. The Kali year 4922, the year Vikrama, the 22nd of the true Jēshṭha, Monday.

Mahādēva ;—after some time, the elephants in his country having increased beyond bounds, were causing destruction to the fruits and crops raised by men for their sustenance, killing wayfarers, and doing damage to the houses,—so, when the subjects respectfully petitioned that they were unable to bear these calamities, considering in his mind that it is the duty of a king to put down the evil and uphold the good, he prayed to Gaurīdhava (Śiva) to give him power to remove these troubles, and having gained the help of Sāmba-Śankara's (Śiva's) supreme favour, from that date to the year Tāraṇa (= 1824 A.D.), the 12th of the dark fortnight of Chaitra, Monday,—2 years, 1 month and 25 days,—to the 1,798,913th Kali day,—during those days, going among the herds of rutting elephants ranging in the midst of the forests by means of his painted chariot like a lion, he made good the pronunciation of gaja (elephant) in the popular form aja (goat).

The number of elephants which by the valour and power of his arm he in various ways brought to an end, and of those which by his orders trained soldiers captured alive with chains, is as follows :—In the year Chitrabhānu (1822 A.D.), on the 10th of the dark fortnight of Āshāḍha, in Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa tālōk, elephants killed 6, captured 9 ; on the 7th of the dark fortnight of Srāvaṇa, in the same tālōk, elephants killed 42, captured 22 ; on the 5th of the bright fortnight of Adhika Āśvayuja, in the same tālōk and in Uluguli-Mūḍigēri-nāḍ, elephants killed 47, captured 15 ; on the 11th of the same bright fortnight, in Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa tālōk, Horūr-Nūrokkal-nāḍ and Uluguli-Mūḍigēri-nāḍ, elephants killed 34, captured 6 ; on the 11th of the bright fortnight of Nija Āśvayuja, in Nanjarāyapaṭṭaṇa tālōk, elephants killed 20, captured 6 ; in the year Svabhānu (1823 A.D.), on the 5th of the bright fortnight of Nija Chaitra, in Koḍagu-Śrīrangapaṭṭaṇa, elephants killed 4, captured 18 ; on the 3rd of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha, in Beṭṭiyatta-nāḍ and Channanakōṭe, elephants killed 21, captured 41 ; in the year Tāraṇa (1824 A.D.), on the 12th of the dark fortnight of Chaitra, in Kiggaṭṭu-nāḍ, elephants killed 10, captured 40 ; on thirty other days, elephants killed 49, captured 24 ;—altogether, in thirty-eight days, elephants killed by his own hand 233, captured alive by hand by trained soldiers according to order 181 ;—total of both 414.

In this manner the desires of all being accomplished, astonishment was expressed as follows :—In the forests, herds of elephants, towering like mountains, hid the sun as when the sky is overcast with storm-clouds, and roamed about trumpeting ; but with seven-tongued weapons (fire-arms) like thunderbolts he slew them in a moment, while men captured alive stout and lofty rutting elephants as if they were mice,—this was indeed a marvel.

APPENDIX.

Mysore and Coorg from the Inscriptions.

Emendations due to more recent discoveries, etc.

Page 3. Nandas.—The following may be adduced as indicating some connexion of Nandas, or rulers of Nanda descent, with the north of Mysore and other parts to the north-west. A number of leaden coins were found in 1888 at the site of Chandrāvali, an ancient city to the west of Chitaldroog. Some of these bore legends in Brāhmi characters, which have been read as Mahārāṭhisa Sadakana Kaḷalāya and Raño Muḍā Naṃdasa, surrounding a humped bull, and having on the reverse the Buddhist symbols of a Bōdhi tree and a chaitya. The former is therefore an Andhra coin of a Sātakarṇi, and the latter may be a Nanda coin. Another find of similar coins was made at the same place in 1909 (MAR), which also bore these legends, with the variants Jadakana Kaḷayasa in the first, and Muḷā for Muḍā in the second, in addition to one having the legend Raño Chuṭukaḍḍā Naṃdasa. With these were found, giving a clue to their period, a Roman silver denarius of Augustus, and a Chinese brass coin with a hole in the middle, probably belonging to 138 B.C., the time of the emperor Han Wu-ti. Coins of the same series have moreover been found at Karwar in North Kanara. Now the Sātakarṇi stone inscriptions of perhaps the 2nd century at Malavaḷḷi (Sk 263) and Banavāsi (IA, xiv, 333) give as one of his titles Vinhukaḍḍa Chuṭukulā Nanda, and thus seem to afford evidence of the location in some way, in that region, of Nanda rule. Even Professor Rapson read the legends on the Karwar coins at first in the same sense, but has since adopted the reading kuḷānaṇḍa, 'joy of the family,' which deprives it so far of any special historical value.

Page 8. Mudrā Rākshasa.—The date of this drama Professor Speyer considered should be placed many centuries earlier than is generally done. To this Mr. C. H. Tawney adds, that it is highly satisfactory to have the antiquity of this interesting play rendered so highly probable. And Mr. Vincent Smith says, it used to be dated in the 8th century, but is now ascribed by some scholars to the Gupta period, in the 5th or 6th century (Hillebrandt).

Page 10. Punnāṭa.—Jinasēna, who wrote his Harivaṃśa in 783, was of the Bṛihat-Punnāta-sangha.

" " Avinīta.—Read 'who married the Punnād king's daughter, and their son Durvvinīta united it'. . . . . .

Page 12. Edicts (of Aśōka).—Dr. Thomas's discovery that 256 referred to nights, and M. Sylvain Levi's new translation of amisā have upset the previous renderings of certain passages in the Brahmagiri and cognate edicts. Dr. Fleet now proposes the following (JRAS, 1911, p. 1098)—Thus says Dēvāṇampiya: (There are) two and-a-half years and somewhat more, during which I, who am an Upāsaka, did not display much zeal for one year. But (there is) one year, with the balance (of that period), during which I, who have betaken myself to the Sangha, have displayed much zeal: and during this time gods and men, who had not (previously) mixed in Jambudvīpa, have now been made mixed. For this is a result of zeal, and it is not to be reached by high rank (alone); for even the great heaven may be attained by a lowly person who displays zeal'. . . . . 'And this address was delivered by him who spent 256 nights in worship'. Dr. Hultzsch translates (id. 1115)—'But men in Jambudvīpa who up to this time had been unassociated with the gods have (now) been made associated with the gods'. And Pandit Laddu (id. 1119)—'In Jambudvīpa the gods (of the well-known Hindu pantheon) who up to this time had not been associated (with men like Gautama and others) have now been made associated with them (by me through my non-sectarian zeal)'. Dr. Waddell says (AQR, January 1912, p. 105)—'Aśōka obviously intended by this reference to the gods to enforce the dogma of the higher Buddhism, that in a Buddhist country 'there is no difference between gods and men', because all are equally subject to transmigration (cf. Mahāyāna Texts, SBE); but the existence of the gods is here accepted by Aśōka, whose favourite title was 'The Beloved of the Gods'. Dr. Thomas writes (JRAS, 1912, p. 480)—'M. Levi's convincing interpretation of amisā has been generally accepted, and the resultant meaning that "those men in Jambudvīpa who had 'had unmixing gods' have been mixed with the gods" appears inevitable. But the practical import is far from clear, and I am unable to solve the problem. That the gods mentioned are real gods (see Fleet and Hultzsch above) and not kings, as M. Levi suggested, and that the munisā are ordinary men and not deified teachers, as is proposed by Pandit Laddu, is the most natural interpretation. We must remember that the result described had been attained—and not by greatness, but by energy—in little more than a year. Are we to understand a conversion of people who previously did not recognize the Brahmanical gods? In any case the result is a curious outcome of Aśōka's first work as a zealous Buddhist. But for the laity, even among the Buddhists, heaven is the goal in prospect as appears later in this very edict, and also in Rock Edict vi. Asōka is himself dēvānāmpriya. Prof. Venis (in letter to Dr. Hultzsch, quoted JRAS 1913, p. 652) says—'If plain folk are to understand Dēvānāmpriya when he says that a new condition of things had been so rapidly brought about in Jambudvīpa by his religious zeal, they must be shown some outward physical fact or sign which they could at once accept as the intelligible or usual attendant of religious zeal.' Dr. H. adds—'This postulate is complied with if we assume that the 'gods' (dēvā) of the Rūpnāth edict are identical with the divyāni rūpāni, etc., of the fourth rock edict, and that in both cases Aśōka wished to remind his subjects of certain religious shows at which he had exhibited to them in effigie the gods whose abodes they would be able to reach by the zealous practice of dhamma'. In regard to the 256, Dr. Fleet (id. 656), writes—'We know that Aśōka was anointed as king when 218 years had elapsed, i.e., at some time in the year 219 current after the death of Buddha, and that he then reigned for 37 years: this carries us on to some point in the year 219+37 = 256 current; and giving a year the figures of which are the same with those of the nights which are mentioned in the record. The topic of the record is zeal or energy in the practice of morality and religion; and the record expands the dying speech of Buddha, whose last words were—'Work out your salvation by diligence.' Taken with the other points, the agreement in the numbers—256 nights and 256 years—indicates a conclusion which seems irresistible: namely, that, after reigning for 37 years, Aśōka, in the course of the 256th year after the death of Buddha, abdicated and passed into religious retirement on the hill Suvarnagiri; that the address published in the record was delivered by him on the 256th night after that event; that it was delivered on that particular occasion because he then fulfilled in worship at night in his retirement a number of nights equal to the number of years which in the meantime had been completed since the death of Buddha; and that it contains his last pronouncement, if not actually his dying words.'

Page 14. For 'he sent' read 'under him were sent'. . . .

,, ,, (Note)—Read 'Māmūlanār's verses in the Aganānūru, and he is of the'. . . .

,, 15. Sivakhada-Nāgasiri.—According to Rapson this is the name of the Prince associated with the Queen in the donation. Her name is not given. But from an inscription at Kanheri is said to be Nāgamulanikā.

Page 19. There is an inscription of a Bāṇa king Aggapa-Rāju, of 968 A.D., in the Nellore district (iii, 1201).

Page 20. The Chōḷa king.—Before this insert—'The Nolamba king Mahēndra (c. 878) is called Mahābalikula-vidhvamsanam, or destroyer of the Mahābali family (EI, x, 65).

Page 21. Aśōka sent—Read 'under Aśōka was sent'.

,, 25. Māndhātṛivarmmā's father was Kumāravarmmā. Mṛigēsavarmmā's queen was Prabhāvati of the Kaikēya family, and mother of Ravivarmmā (MAR 1911).

,, 32. Or law of adoption—Substitute note—Dattaka is mentioned by Vatsyāyana, author of the Kāmasūtra, as having written a separate work on one branch (named Vaiśika) of the subject, at the instance of the dancing girls of Pātalīputra. Dattaka may be placed in perhaps the first century A.D. (JRAS 1911, p. 183). Dattaka appears in Kannada as Jattaka. Thus the Hoysala prince Ereyanga is described (Ak 102a) as abalā-Jattakan, or a Jattaka to the weaker sex.

Page 33. Appogāl village—add "The Tamil chronicle attributes to him another grant at Tagadūr in 288 to Brāhmans for the worship of Mūlasthān Īsvara" (see IA, i, 361).

Page 34. End of para. 2—add "A grant by him to a Buddhist has been obtained at Melekōte, Tumkūr tāluq (MAR 1910).

Page 35. Outside customs—add "A grant of his 25th year has been found" (MAR 1911).

,, 35. End of para.—continue—He married the daughter of Skandavarmmā, the Rāja of Punnāḍ. This is of course the Punnāta in the south-west of Mysore to which reference has been made before, in connection with the Jain migration under Bhadrabāhu. (Substitute for next para.)—

Durvvinīta, his son by the Punnāḍ Rāja's daughter, succeeded him in c. 482, although his father, acting on the advice of his own guru, had set him aside (from the succession) in favour of another son. But Lakshmī

(the goddess of sovereignty) came to him of her own accord and embraced his broad chest (Bn 141, Mi 110, DB 68). His supersession at first is confirmed by the interesting old Siragunda stone inscription (Cm 50), which states that Nirvvinīta's (i.e. Avinīta's) younger son obtained the Koṅgaṇi crown. This he did, it adds, from Kāḍuveṭṭi (a common name for the Pallava king) and the Vallava (Ballaha or Rāshṭrakūṭa) king[1]. But we are informed in Nr 35 that Durvvinīta captured Kāḍuveṭṭi on the field of battle and placed his own daughter's son Jayasiṁha-Vallabha on his hereditary throne. This is the name of the Chalukya prince who by defeating the Rāshṭrakūṭas laid the foundation of the Chalukya power in the South. It may perhaps be inferred therefore that Durvvinīta had entered into alliance with the Chalukyas and given his daughter in marriage to the representative of that family, though this is not actually mentioned anywhere.

Durvvinīta was distinguished for his literary ability. For we are told that he wrote a commentary on the fifteenth sarga of the Kirātārjuniya, a Sanskrit poem by Bhāravi. This sarga is full of verbal puzzles and riddles. One stanza contains no consonant but n, with a single t at the end; in another, each half-line read backwards is similar to the other half (see IGI, ii, 240; JRAS 1911, 187). We are also informed (Tm 23, and grant of his 40th year lately found, MAR 1912) that he was himself the author of a Śabdāvatāra (the name of a work always attributed to the Jain grammarian Pūjyapāda [2]), and of a version in Sanskrit of the Vaḍḍakathā, which from Tm 23 apparently means the Bṛihatkathā, a work known in oriental literature as having been written in the Paiśāchi dialect[3]. He is no doubt the Durvvinīta named in Nṛipatunga's Kavirājamārgga as one of the distinguished early Kannaḍa authors.

Page 36. Omit lines 1–5, him . . . Bhadrabāhu. Also 12–17, Another . . . Nirvvinīta.

„ „ End of para.—add "One has been lately found of his 40th year (MAR 1912)."

„ 41. End of second para.—Add 'which was maintained by Kambharasa (IA xviii, 313). He fell in a battle against Vallaha at Kāgimogeyūr, in the Tumkūr country (MAR 1910).'

Page 42. Piḍuvipati.—add 'His name may have been Diṇḍika.' On the throne—add–'in 817.' Pallavādhiraja's daughter—continue 'and gave his own daughter Jāyabbe, the younger sister of Nītimārgga, to Nolambādhirāja.' To footnote add SII ii, 381.

Page 45. The exact date of which event is not known—substitute—"the date of which event is 869".

„ 47. Thirty-two Thousand (para. 3) continue "A grant in the reign of Rakkasa-Ganga has been found at Haḷe Būdanūr, Mandya tālnq, without date. But on another side of the same stone is one of Rājēndra-Chōḷa's 12th year. Nāgavarmmā, the author of Chhandōmbudhi, says that Rakkasa-Ganga was his king. This has been omitted for some reason by Mr. Kittel in his edition of the work".

Page 49. In table.—After Harivarmmā, 247–26¢, add "[2] and footnote", "In the Tamil chronicle 288 is given as a date in his reign". After Mādhava III, 357–370, add "[3] and footnote." "At this point, between Mādhava III and Avinīta, the Tamil chronicle inserts a Diṇḍikara-Rāja or Hariśchandra, who ruled for only a short time". After Avinīta, continue "c. 430–482 (l. 2) Kali-Ganga, Nirvvinīta (l. 3)m. Punnāḍ princess". After Durvvinīta continue "c. 482–522. ." and omit l. 2.

Page 50. In table.—For '670,' against Bhūvikrama and Sivamāra I substitute '679.' Under Prithivipati I, insert "? Diṇḍika". After Rājamalla Satyavākya I—add '817–828' . . 'After Nitimargga I,' add '—869'.

Page 55. Omit 'the younger sister of Noḷambādhirāja', and after Jāyābbe insert "the younger sister of Nītimārgga."

Page 56.—Fighting with the Ganga king—add 'He is said to have destroyed the Mahābali family (the Bāṇas), and hence was called Mahābali-kula-vidhvamsanam' (EI x, 65). End of para.—add 'He apparently had a younger brother (Mb 38), the Noḷambādhirāja-Nolipayya ruling in 897 (Mi 52), who had a son Aukayya (Mi 27). Para. 3—omit 'Noḷipayya'; '897 in Mi 52'; 'and Ankayya.'

---

[1] An interesting parallel to this occurrence took place some centuries later, when the Ganga king Śivamāra-Saigoṭṭa, on his release from captivity, was crowned with their own hands by Gōvinda-Prabhūtavarsha, the Rāshṭrakūṭa king, and Nandivarmmā, the Pallava king (Yd 60, Nl 60).

[2] Thus we have in Nr 46 the following verse :—

nyāsam Jainēndra-saṁjñaṁ sakala-budha-nutaṁ Pāninīyasya bhūyō- |
nyāsam Śabdāvatāraṁ manuja-tati-hitaṁ Vaidya-śāstraṁ cha kṛitvā ||
yas Tatvārtthasya ṭīkāṁ vyarachayad iha tāṁ bhāty asau Pūjyapāda- |
svāmī bhūpāla-vandyaḥ sva-para-hita-vachah pūrnna-dṛig-bōdha-vṛittaḥ ||

Perhaps Pūjyapāda may have been Durvvinīta's preceptor, but this is not so stated.

[3] It is strange that in a Sanskrit sentence the above Prākrit word should be used in designating a work which has a recognized Sanskrit title. The actual name in Tm 23 is Bṛihatvṛithaḥ, but this seems to be a mistake of the engraver.

Page 130. Note—add 'The Bēḍas are said in Manucci to leap on to the quarters of the horse behind and cut off the nose of the horseman. This mode of attack is paralleled by that of the wild Irish at the end of the 14th century, as described in Froissart's Chronicle, where it is said that they leap from the ground behind a horseman and embrace the rider so tightly that he can in no way get rid of them, and cut his throat'.

Page 145. For last two lines, read 'originally founded and endowed by the Koṅgālva king Rājādhirāja in the name of his mother, and recovered the grants, which are still continued. The Vijayanagar king Harihara II at the same time made a grant of Muḷḷur-nād to Gonka-Ḍaḍḍi-nāyaka, who had been noticed (for his bravery) by his general Guṇḍappa-daṇṇāyaka (Cg 39)'.

Page 146. For l. 13–17 substitute ' Avinīta married the daughter of Skandavarmmā, the Rāja of Punnāḍ, and their son was Durvvinīta, who reigned from c. 482 to 522.

Page 153. Add to footnote ' Padinālkunāḍ is mentioned in 1277 and 1295, in the time of the Hoysalas (Ch 65, 44) '.

Page 161. Read ' bearer of the Hadapa (or betel bag) '.

Page 176. L. 9 from bottom, read ' abduction of a gurū's wife and the murder of Brāhmans '.

„ 178. For ' mana (maunds) ' read ' māna (a half seer) '.

„ 196. Dattaka-sūtra—See correction above to p. 32.

„ 197. For ' (Kolhapur &c.) ' read ' (Karahāṭa or Karhāḍ in Satāra District). l. 22 insert ' and that Prabhāchandra composed the Nyāyakumuda-chandrōdaya, a Nyāsa on Śākaṭāyana's sūtras '—and omit this passage from l. 18–19.

„ 203. Add note to l. 11–' A grant of the 4th century by the Ganga king Mādhava III to a Buddhist named Buddhisatva has been obtained at Melekōṭe, Tumkūr District (MAR 1910).

„ 207. End of para. 2, add ' (Sr 86) '. See also remarks now on Cg 8 and 9.
